OKLAHOMA typically lands at the lower end of 50-state rankings on a host of issues, so it's worth noting those occasions when the opposite occurs. The 2016 edition of the libertarian Cato Institute's “Freedom in the 50 States” report ranks

Oklahoma third-best for overall freedom.

The report ranks states “based on how their policies promote freedom in the fiscal, regulatory, and personal realms.” The authors' libertarian viewpoint leads them to emphasize some issues that one would expect (such as supporting lower levels of taxation and light regulation), but also more controversial policies (such as the institute's support for marijuana legalization and gambling).

Even so, there's much to like in the report.

Cooperation, Collaboration Produce Momentous Water Rights Agreement

08/18/2016 11:00 AM CDT

I'm proud to be part of the recently announced water rights settlement agreement among the state of Oklahoma, the Chickasaw and Choctaw nations and Oklahoma City. Having a sufficient, reliable supply of water is essential for life, economic development, manufacturing, recreational activities, and important industry sectors like agriculture and energy.

The settlement, which will be presented to Congress for final approval, will resolve long-standing questions over water rights ownership and regulatory authority over the waters of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations' historic treaty territories, an area that spans approximately 22 counties in south-central and southeastern Oklahoma.

Gov. Fallin Considers Special Session to Address Pay Raises for Public School Teachers

07/27/2016 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued this statement on the announcement that $140.8 million initially cut from agency allocations midyear can now be allocated.

"I've begun discussions with legislative leaders to consider calling lawmakers to return in special session to address the issue of teacher pay raises. I continue to support a pay raise for teachers, having called on lawmakers at the beginning of this year's session to approve a teacher pay raise. Lawmakers considered it, but this was an extremely difficult budget year and a funding agreement couldn't be reached. With this available money, I am again asking lawmakers to act on this important issue of providing a raise for every teacher in this state."

The money is available because General Revenue Fund allocation reductions required by the FY 2016's midyear revenue failure were deeper than necessary. Without a special session, the $140.8 million would OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed the 2017 fiscal year budget bill (Senate Bill 1616) into law. She also signed another bill and vetoed another, closing the book on the 2016 legislative session.

SB 1616, which outlines spending of state tax dollars for the fiscal year that begins July 1, maintains common education funding at current levels, averts closures of hospitals and nursing homes and closes $969.3 million of the $1.3 billion budget gap lawmakers faced this legislative session. The $6.78 billion budget is $360.7 million, or 5 percent, less than the 2016 fiscal year budget prior to the midyear revenue failure. It is $67.8 million, or 1 percent, less than the 2016 fiscal year appropriations as adjusted by the midyear revenue failure.

The $1.3 billion budget hole was the largest in state history.

The total dollar value of the media attention is approximately $4.5 million.

“The excitement regarding ‘American Ninja Warrior’ has brought attention to Oklahoma to many people across the state and across the country,” said Governor Mary Fallin. “The stories about the show and it being filmed in front of our state Capitol are bringing a great deal of positive press to our state that we otherwise wouldn’t have been

Challenging Legislative Session Had Its Bright Spots

06/07/2016 10:00 AM CDT

This legislative session certainly lived up to its billing as being challenging. Lawmakers faced a $1.3 billion budget gap, the largest budget hole in state history.

I am pleased that lawmakers were able to make targeted spending cuts and free up revenues through tax reform and structural budget changes to close the gap. Those reforms included making some money in the Cash Flow Reserve Fund available for legislative appropriation, improving revenue stability of the General Revenue Fund by passing legislation creating the Revenue Stabilization Fund to deal with fluctuations in energy prices, and apportionment reform. We also ended the double deduction on income tax, capped a tax credit for at-risk wells and adjusted a coal credit.

We worked hard to protect key core services – common education, health and human services, corrections and the Oklahoma Health Care Authority – while keeping our eight-year transportation infrastructure plan intact.

05/20/2016 04:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued an executive order directing the Oklahoma Department of Wildlife Conservation (ODWC) to streamline the issuance of permits to exterminate feral hogs on private land.

She said her order will allow safe and responsible feral hog eradication in Oklahoma.

The governor also vetoed a measure that would have allowed the eradication of feral hogs on public land with spotlights at night without game warden notification or a hunting license, citing potential safety issues.

Fallin said Senate Bill 1142 contained several provisions -- such as eliminating the permitting requirement for those who want to exclusively shoot feral hogs, authorizing nighttime removal and allowing the use of certain technology to eradicate feral hogs -- that would endanger people on public hunting lands.

“We must be willing to employ every available method of elimination if we want to eradicate this

Gov. Fallin Vetoes Unconstitutional Anti-Abortion Bill

05/20/2016 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin, who has a long history of championing and signing pro-life and pro-family legislation, today vetoed a measure that would have banned abortion in the state because the bill was vague and would not withstand a criminal constitutional legal challenge.

Fallin is the most pro-life governor in the nation. She has signed 18 bills supporting pro-life values and protecting the health and lives of mothers and their unborn children.

Senate Bill 1552 would have made it a felony for physicians to perform abortions. It also contained a provision to revoke their medical licenses unless the abortion was necessary to save the life of the mother.

“The bill is so ambiguous and so vague that doctors cannot be certain what medical circumstances would be considered ‘necessary to preserve the life of the mother,’” Fallin said.

“The absence of any definition, analysis or medical

“When the state of Oklahoma carries out the death penalty, we must ensure that the process is appropriate and in full compliance with the law. It is imperative that Oklahoma be able to manage the execution process properly. With new management at the Department of Corrections, led by Interim Director Joe Allbaugh, I am confident we can move forward with a process that complies with the applicable policies, protocols and legal requirements.”

The governor applauded lawmakers for taking steps to approve the cigarette tax, which requires a three-fourths majority in both the House and Senate, instead of approving a measure sending the question to a vote of the people in November.

“Legislative approval means revenue from the tax can be coming into state coffers sooner, which would help offset some of the $1.3 billion deficit facing our state in the upcoming fiscal year, which starts July and community sentencing as well as give judges and district attorneys more discretion in sentencing.”

“Oklahoma’s drug possession sentences have filled our prisons to over capacity,” said Fallin. “These sentences, while well intentioned, tend to send some nonviolent offenders into prison for years and years, where they live alongside violent offenders whose bad influences can make nonviolent offenders worse.

“Keeping our public safe from dangerous people will always be a priority, however with our state prisons filled to well over capacity, it is vital that we make some changes to our criminal justice system. These measures will address Oklahoma’s prison population, which is among the highest in the nation, without jeopardizing public safety.”

ICYMI: WalletHub Study: Oklahoma Is the State with the 6th-Lowest Tax Burden

04/11/2016 12:45 PM CDT

Only a week remains before Uncle Sam takes his cut from everyone’s earnings this past year. And many taxpayers are already wondering what that haircut on their finances will look like. However, with such a complex and convoluted tax code that’s further complicated by how taxes are imposed on Americans based on their individual household characteristics, it’s hard to tell.

But one simple ratio, “tax burden,” cuts through the confusion and gives a straightforward answer. Not to be confused with tax rates, which fluctuate widely based on an individual’s particular circumstances, tax burden measures the exact portion of the total personal income of residents in a state that are paid toward state and local taxes.

To determine which states are most aggressive at taking their residents' income, WalletHub's analysts compared the 50 states across the three tax types that comprise state tax burden — property

Governor Mary Fallin Tours Central Oklahoma Habitat for Humanity Inmate Program

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin toured Central Oklahoma Habitat for Humanity’s (COHFH) inmate program contracted through the Department of Human Services today at the Central Oklahoma Habitat headquarters located at 5005 S I-35 Service Rd. in Oklahoma City.

“Programs like this must be part of our approach to criminal justice. We must show offenders that there are other choices than returning to crime once they are released from prison,” said Fallin. “This Habitat for Humanity program teaches inmates important skills, while benefitting an organization that works to provide much-needed homes for low-income residents.”

The COHFH Inmate Program is a Department of Corrections (DOC) Prisoners Public Work Program (PPWP), which allows inmates

Gov. Fallin Declares State of Emergency for Woods County Due to Wildfires, Drought Conditions

03/28/2016 05:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued an executive order declaring a state of emergency for Woods County, where a wildfire has burned almost 400,000 acres of prairie and ranch land in it and two adjoining counties in Kansas.

The fire began last week in Oklahoma and spread north to Kansas, where it has been described as the largest in its state history. The fire at one time covered about 140,000 acres in Oklahoma

The governor said moderate drought conditions that exist in northwest Oklahoma and the Panhandle are contributing to the threat to Woods County residents and their property.

Under the executive order, state agencies can make emergency purchases and acquisitions needed to expedite the delivery of resources to local jurisdictions.

The executive order is in effect for 30 days, and could be amended to include additional counties if needed.

Gov. Fallin Says USGS Earthquake Hazard Map Shows State Regulators Are Taking Correct Action

03/28/2016 12:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Mary Fallin today said the first-ever map developed by the United States Geological Survey (USGS) showing potential ground-shaking hazards from both human-induced and natural earthquakes illustrates why action taken earlier this year by the Oklahoma Corporation Commission (OCC) was necessary.

Researchers say the state's rise in earthquakes is caused by the disposal of produced saltwater deep into the Arbuckle formation. The OCC, which has constitutional authority over oil and natural gas activity in the state, is following the recommendation of researchers and is continuing to work with operators to significantly reduce the overall disposal of produced water into the area of seismic interest within the Arbuckle formation area to 40 percent below the 2014 total.

The OCC last month issued a wide-ranging directive to saltwater disposal well operators in areas experiencing earthquakes. In the past year, regulators have FEMA approved public assistance for 42 Oklahoma counties that were affected by the same storm and individual assistance for 33 Missouri counties and 11 Arkansas counties.

SB 1571 sends $27.5 million to the Department of Corrections (DOC) for payroll and essential services for inmate population increases.

“I appreciate members of the House of Representatives and the Senate for their quick approval of these two bills, and for the cooperation of their leaders in agreeing that this is the most responsible option,” said Fallin. “The appropriation of these supplemental funds will pay for vital state services for education and corrections between now and when this fiscal year ends on June 30.

“Now, legislators need to focus on the 2017

Seeking Foster Families to Take Care of Our Children

03/11/2016 10:30 AM CST

I can still remember the late-night telephone calls. My mom worked for the Department of Human Services and was needed to deal with an emergency placement of a child. As my mom prepared to leave, I would hope there would be a safe home to take care of those children.

I still have that wish today. A new initiative that DHS and I recently launched is helping make my wish a reality.

Oklahoma Fosters is a combined, coordinated campaign to renew our efforts to find foster families for the hundreds of children in state custody and coming into state custody.

Our goal, simply put, is to recruit more foster families.

These children are in state custody through no fault of their own. These children need foster families to love and support them during their time of need.

There are nearly 10,500 children in the foster care system, and we desperately need the help of all Oklahomans.

Conversation about Providing Children with Needed Educational Options to Continue

03/10/2016 04:15 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – House Speaker Jeff Hickman and Senate President Pro-Tempore Brian Bingman announced neither the House nor Senate will be voting on separate measures today that would create Education Savings Accounts (ESAs). The leaders resolved to continue working on the critical issue of providing Oklahoma children with needed educational opportunities until a resolution can be agreed upon by legislators of both chambers.

“The focus of this effort has been, first and foremost, to find solutions for the children who desperately need better opportunities and to know someone cares,” said Hickman, R-Fairview. “The desire to improve student outcomes and empower parents without harming our public schools will be the goal we continue to work toward in the future.”

The bills that had passed legislative committees were House Bill 2949 and Senate Bill 609.

“I appreciate Senator Jolley’s efforts on SB 609,”

Ford serves on numerous boards and commissions. He is the owner and president of Charles R. Ford Co., a real estate investment firm in Tulsa. He also began a non-profit foundation which has provided more than 170 pieces of fine art at no charge to the state Capitol.

Governor, legislative leaders announce agreement to tap Rainy Day Fund for public schools, prisons

03/09/2016 05:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin, Senate President Pro Tempore Brian Bingman and House Speaker Jeff Hickman today announced an agreement to use about $78.5 million from the state’s Rainy Day Fund to partially offset budget cuts to common education and corrections for the remainder of this fiscal year.

Under the agreement, the Department of Education is to receive $51 million and the Department of Corrections (DOC) is to receive $27.5 million.

"All of us can agree that four-day school weeks and draconian cuts to corrections are not acceptable and are not going to happen," said Fallin. "This is the most responsible option available to keep vital state services for education and corrections going between now and the end of June when this fiscal year ends."

Bingman said: "The Rainy Day Fund is there for emergencies and right now it's pouring in Oklahoma. Tapping the Rainy Day Fund is the right way to

Gov. Fallin Proposes Rainy Day Fund Withdrawal for Schools and Prisons

03/07/2016 04:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today proposed using the state’s savings account, the Rainy Day Fund, to partially offset last week’s deepened budget cuts to common education and prisons.

The governor suggested using $51 million for public schools and $21 million for the Department of Corrections. The Rainy Day Fund contains $385 million, of which $144.4 million is available to address the 2016 fiscal year revenue failure.

"Four-day school weeks and draconian cuts at prisons are not acceptable and are not going to happen. The deepened revenue failure cuts have changed the budget situation in a way that requires immediate action, so I support accessing the Rainy Day Fund for common education and prisons," said Fallin. "This is the most responsible option available today to keep vital state services at acceptable levels until the Legislature and I reach agreement on the recurring revenues necessary to fund these

Gov. Fallin Applauds House of Representatives for Passing Criminal Justice Bills

03/07/2016 03:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Mary Fallin today commended the Oklahoma House of Representatives for its bipartisan approval of four bills related to reforms spotlighted in her State of the State address last month.

“These measures address Oklahoma’s prison population, which is among the highest in the nation, without jeopardizing public safety,” said Fallin. “With our state prisons filled to well over capacity, it is vital that we make some changes to our criminal justice system.”

The House passed:

- House Bill 2472 would give prosecutors discretion to file charges for non-85 percent crimes as misdemeanors instead of felonies.
- House Bill 2479 would reduce the mandatory punishment for subsequent drug offenses.
- House Bill 2751 would raise the threshold for property crimes to be charged as a felony to

Gov. Fallin Thanks House of Representatives for Passing Revenue Measure

03/07/2016 12:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today applauded the Oklahoma House of Representatives for passing a bill that would free up about $125 million annually for the General Revenue Fund, the state’s main spending account.

House Bill (HB) 3058 would automatically reconcile some agency revolving funds, which usually contain a total of about $1.5 billion. The House voted 56-28 to pass HB 3058. It now goes to the Senate.

“The transfer of monies from these accounts is often mischaracterized as one-time revenue, despite the fact the majority of these accounts replenish yearly,” said Fallin. “These funds are there every year. They are not one-time funds.”

The measure, by Rep. Tom Newell, was one of several ideas the governor proposed in her State of the State address last month to capture more than $900 million in recurring revenues for appropriations to help fund core services. The state is facing a $1.3 billion

Four bills proposed by the governor’s Oklahoma Justice Reform Committee are scheduled to be heard early next week by the state House of Representatives.

The letter supporting the bills was signed by:

The Oklahoman Editorial: Repealing Tax Credits Won't Solve Oklahoma Budget Shortfall

By The Oklahoman Editorial Board Published: March 4, 2016

GIVEN Oklahoma's $1.3 billion shortfall, many expected state lawmakers to consider some tax or fee increases this year, along with spending cuts, to fill the budget hole. And members of the Oklahoma Senate, in particular, have advanced numerous bills to repeal or place moratoriums on current tax breaks.

The problem is that the Senate has advanced numerous tax increases of various stripes while doing little to address this year's budget challenges. This is occurring because the impact of many tax changes would not be felt until the 2018 budget year, as opposed to the 2017 state budget lawmakers are drafting this session.

That policy formula would give Oklahomans the worst of both worlds: massive spending cuts in 2017 followed by large tax increases in 2018. So why raise taxes to

Two of the bills were passed today, while the committee approved the other two earlier this month. The bills are:

Gov. Fallin Says Oklahoma's Economic Development Efforts Paying off

02/22/2016 01:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today said she is optimistic about recent economic development activity, despite the downturn being experienced in the energy sector.

“During the first six months of the fiscal year, the Oklahoma Department of Commerce reports that 28 companies made plans to invest more than $2.3 billion over a ramp-up period of three years. These investments will create more than 3,600 new jobs with a projected average annual wage of more than $64,000,” said Fallin. “The attraction and expansion projects secured in the first half of the 2016 fiscal year alone will bring an estimated $232 million in new annual payroll to the state. That’s good news.”

Gov. Fallin Warns of Extreme Fire Danger Tomorrow Across Most of Oklahoma

02/17/2016 05:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today called on all Oklahomans to take precautions as the state faces weather conditions that bring extreme fire danger.

“We know from past experience that everyone doing their part can have an effect,” said Fallin. “This is a short duration event with potentially dire consequences. But vigilant residents can reduce the potential impacts.”

The National Weather Service is predicting critical fire weather conditions for Thursday, with a Red Flag Warning and Fire Weather Watch for 71 counties. The six counties not covered are Atoka, Bryan, Coal, Johnston, Marshall and McCurtain.

Under Red Flag Warning and Fire Weather Watch conditions, officials urge extreme caution because a simple spark can cause a major wildfire.

State and federal agencies are making preparations to respond to any wildfire that

OERB Research Grant to Modernize Wastewater Reporting System

Funding will be used to purchase new system to better collect, analyze data

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin’s Coordinating Council on Seismic Activity today announced a research grant from the Oklahoma Energy Resources Board (OERB) that will create a new digital system to collect data on wastewater disposal wells in the state.

OERB, which is a member of the coordinating council, stepped up to help provide much-needed technology improvements at the Oklahoma Corporation Commission.

“This is why I created the council,” said Fallin. “It proves that we have assembled the right group of industry representatives, agencies, regulators and researchers to address Oklahoma’s rise in earthquakes.”

02/16/2016 04:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued this statement after the Oklahoma Supreme Court upheld the Lindsey Nicole Henry Scholarships for Students with Disabilities Act, which is a scholarship program intended to provide educational options for children with disabilities who live within the state:

“This program saves money for the public school system, while benefiting children with special needs by allowing them to select the educational options that best suits them. This is a victory for students with disabilities across our state and for their families.

“This also is a victory for education in Oklahoma. All students learn differently, so each of them should have the opportunity to attend a school that offers the best environment for success. This can be accomplished through Education Savings Accounts, which I encourage legislators to approve this session, while still protecting school finances.”

Gov. Fallin Rejects Proposed Mental Health Rules Barring SoonerCare Payments to Private Therapists

02/16/2016 03:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin has rejected permanent state mental health rules that would have prohibited paying independent counselors and therapists in private practice to treat Oklahoma children covered by SoonerCare.

The Oklahoma Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services had proposed the rule change to achieve a necessary budget cut, caused by the recent revenue failure in state government. The agency’s proposed rules supposedly would not have prevented or delayed children from getting the therapy they need because the rules would not have affected any reimbursement for licensed behavioral practitioners who work at agencies.

“These rules, if adopted, would have effectively barred independent licensed behavioral health practitioners from providing mental health services to children who are SoonerCare members,” said Fallin.

An analysis by the governor’s office showed the rules would not save

The Oklahoman: Archbishop Calls for Education Savings Accounts

By Rick Green February 13, 2016

Oklahoma City Archbishop Paul S. Coakley would like the state to pick up part of the tab for parents who want to switch their children from public to private school.

"The Archdiocese of Oklahoma City and I personally support strong public schools; at the same time, we support parental choice in education," he said in a letter Friday to the Legislature and Gov. Mary Fallin.

"In the present environment, we don't want our Catholic schools to become preserves for the elite or wealthy, but rather be accessible to all."

Under pending legislation for "education savings accounts," or "ESAs," a portion of the money the state spends to publicly school a child would follow that child if a parent chose to enroll the child in a private school.

That figure makes travel and tourism the third-largest industry in the state.

“Oklahoma has experienced a tremendous growth in tourism and recreation businesses, destinations and sites which greatly enhance not only our ability to attract visitors and improve Oklahomans’ quality of life but also creates jobs and revenue for our state,” said Fallin. “The money spent at these scenic spots and recreation destinations is a boon for local communities and the state of Oklahoma.”

The studies commissioned by the Oklahoma Tourism and Recreation Department revealed that nearly 20.9 million travelers visited the state in 2014.

Oklahoma Emergency Management Director Albert Ashwood said his agency is exploring all possible options, including appealing the decision. In order to appeal, the state would have to provide new information or document additional damage not included in the original request.

The state of Oklahoma has 30 days to appeal today's denial.

On Wednesday, FEMA approved public assistance for 41 counties that were affected by the same storm. Those Denton, of Edmond, is the governor's representative to the eight-member commission. He is an auditor employed by a private auditing firm, as required by state statute.

"This commission's work is vital, since there is little evidence Oklahoma has ever studied its tax incentives to determine which ones are beneficial to the state as a whole," said Fallin. "James Denton is ideally suited to aid in this review because of his substantial experience as an auditor."

Denton, a certified public accountant, is president and chief executive officer of Arledge & Associates, an Edmond-based accounting firm. He has been with the firm since 1984, its first year in business.

Denton, a Ponca City native, has led Arledge's audit department since 1987, overseeing the

My Priorities for the 2016 Legislative Session

02/02/2016 06:00 PM CST

As February begins, so too does another legislative session in Oklahoma. This year I had the honor of giving my sixth State of the State address, delivering my executive budget and outlining an agenda for forward progress and economic growth.

These are the topics I addressed and the priorities I believe our legislative session should focus on.

Education Is Biggest Priority

Oklahoma's future sits in the classrooms of today. The education of our students remains my biggest priority in my budget, even in fiscal climates like this. My budget does have some good news for education – it appropriates $178 million in new money for a permanent $3,000 teacher pay raise for every teacher in this state. And we can do it without raising the state sales tax rate to the highest level in the nation.

It's also time to merge the administrative costs of the state's underperforming K-8 dependent school

"I immediately made arrangements for the Corporation Commission and OGS to receive the money necessary to meet those needs," Fallin said. "I'm committed to funding seismic research, bringing on line advanced technology and more staff to fully support our regulators as they take meaningful action on earthquakes."

Gov. Fallin Statement on General Electric Leaving High-Tax Connecticut

01/13/2016 05:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today released this statement on General Electric's decision to leave the state of Connecticut because of that state's tax hike on business:

"This is precisely why we know lower taxes influence where businesses go. High taxes are job killers and hurt families' disposable income. Some have suggested that Oklahoma should postpone the 0.25 percent income tax cut that went into effect this month because of the budget shortfall and its impact on the upcoming 2017 fiscal year. The income tax cut's budgetary impact in the upcoming 2017 fiscal year is only a little more than 10 percent of the projected budget hole. Oklahoma would still have over an $800 million budget hole even if that tax cut hadn't taken effect.

“Up until the energy industry downturn, Oklahoma had the fourth-fastest growing economy in the nation. This tax cut will prove its worth in the long term. Tax policy is long-term

Fallin praised U.S. Rep. Frank Lucas, R-Cheyenne, for his help in securing additional funding from the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Natural Resources Conservation Service.

“The devastating floods throughout Oklahoma last year emphasized the importance of maintaining and repairing dams and watersheds throughout our state,” said Lucas. “Every dollar devoted to these critical rehabilitation projects will have an extraordinary impact in protecting the lives and property of Oklahomans.”

Keeping Oklahoma's Momentum Moving Forward

01/05/2016 02:15 PM CST

The New Year has arrived, which means many Oklahomans have made resolutions and personal goals for themselves for 2016. Include me among them.

I'm working on goals for the upcoming legislative session, and in next month's column I'll outline some of my plans for the state. But for now I'd like to go over just a few of the successes my administration had in addressing challenges facing the state in 2015.

If you recall, one of my key goals has been that Oklahoma make improvements in three areas: educational attainment, incarceration and crime, and health. Work still needs to be done in these areas, of course, but inroads have been made this past year.

In education, I held nine meetings across the state on "Oklahoma Works," my initiative to boost educational attainment and better align workforce and education in Oklahoma by developing partnerships between schools, local businesses and other key partners.

The Oklahoman Editorial: Closing State Pension Gaps Is Sound Public Policy

"I know you're not going to be happy."

This is the message Pennsylvania Gov. Tom Wolf has relayed to union leaders recently about his efforts to reduce the state's $50 billion gap between how much is owed in pension obligations and how much the state has on hand. The Wall Street Journal notes that in an effort to end a budget impasse with the Republican-controlled legislature, Wolf, a Democrat, has agreed to retirement cuts for new state hires and current workers.

This has unions unhappy, naturally, but it mirrors what's happening elsewhere across the country: Democratic politicians going against their longtime allies in labor because continuing with business as usual is unsustainable.

Since 2009, the Journal reports, 25 of the 34 states that had Democratic governors in office “have rolled back

The Ultimate Gift of Love: Being a Foster/Adoptive Parent

12/07/2015 06:00 PM CST

We are in the midst of the holiday season. It's one of my favorite times of the year because it means getting together with family. The First Gentleman and I have six children between us, and at times it can be hectic keeping up with everything that is planned in our family. But I wouldn't trade those busy times for anything.

I can't image what it would be like to be separated from family during the holidays. Or worse yet, have no family.

But there are nearly 11,000 children in Oklahoma's foster care system. These children are in state custody through no fault of their own. They need foster families to love and support them during their time of need.

So I'm asking Oklahomans during this season of giving if they can provide this ultimate gift of love.

Last month I helped the Department of Human Services (DHS) launch a program called Oklahoma Fosters. It's a renewed effort to find foster families for

Gov. Fallin Forms Fact-finding Group to Look at Ways 'Produced Water' Can Be Reused

12/01/2015 04:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the formation of a fact-finding work group to look at ways that water produced in oil and natural gas operations may be recycled or reused instead of being injected into underground disposal wells.

The Water for 2060 Produced Water Working Group will be charged with discussing opportunities and challenges associated with treating produced water for beneficial uses, such as industrial use or crop irrigation, Fallin said. Attention will be focused primarily on how water produced from oil and gas activities in north-central Oklahoma can be reused.

“Opening appropriate and environmentally responsible avenues for beneficial use of reclaimed produced water will require coordination across industry sectors and regulatory agencies,” said Fallin, who made the announcement during the 36th Annual Oklahoma Governor’s Water Conference and Research Symposium underway in

LIKE Peter Pan, the Affordable Care Act may never grow old. The program is perhaps even more unsustainable than we thought. The same White House assuring us that Syrian refugees will be thoroughly vetted failed to thoroughly vet its own health care plan.

Obamacare is a ticking time bomb. Or, to put in the "Peter Pan" vernacular, it's a ticking crocodile. Its sustainability is chasing it toward a fiscal gangplank.

Further evidence that Obamacare is based on Tinker Bell-style pixie dust rather than solid business principles came last week. UnitedHealth Group, the largest U.S. health insurer, said it can't commit to participating in the program beyond the coming year.

Why? It's unsustainable. There's that word again, the one that Barack Obama and his friends

"Because of your generosity, we will provide meals to our hungry neighbors in all 77 counties across the state. Just because the drive has ended and we have met our goal, please do not forget the continued importance of giving. As we enter the holiday season, let's all remember the critical role our food banks play, and continue to stock their shelves."

The Feeding Oklahoma Drive benefited the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma, the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma and

11/19/2015 11:30 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin has requested that the Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA) terminate its contracts with the two Planned Parenthood affiliates operating in the state because of their high rate of billing errors.

Fallin urged OHCA Chief Executive Officer Nico Gomez to consider appropriately terminating contracts with Planned Parenthood of Central Oklahoma in Oklahoma City and Planned Parenthood of the Heartland in Tulsa. She also asked Gomez to recommend terminating contracts with similar providers found to have a high billing error rate, have had past findings of overbilling, or associate with other providers who do not rigorously adhere to the high standards that are required to be granted access to public funds.

In 2015, the state paid the two Planned Parenthood affiliates $100,145 for 19,546 claims; the vast majority of Planned Parenthood services qualify for a 90 percent federal match, making the total payment slightly more

He worked for almost 10 years at The Oklahoman, where he covered mostly courts and business news. Marks launched his own communications firm earlier this year, doing freelance writing and communications consulting, before joining Fallin's staff.

11/17/2015 09:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today applauded U.S. House Republican leaders for committing to take swift action to draft legislation to halt President Barack Obama's plan to accept thousands of refugees from Syria. House Speaker Paul Ryan said he wants a vote on the matter this week.

"There is a legitimate public safety concern and more oversight is needed of the refugee program," said Fallin, who has demanded that the president suspend accepting Syrian refugees into the United States after last week's terror attacks in Paris. "This is a federal program and states lack any authority to deny refugee resettlement in their jurisdictions."

Fallin and dozens of other governors, Republicans and Democrats, today participated in a conference call with White House officials, expressing concern and questioning the confidence of the data used to screen the background of refugees from Syria. The president said just last

Gov. Fallin Orders Flags at Half-Staff in Memory of Those Killed in Paris Attacks

11/16/2015 05:15 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today ordered that all American and Oklahoma flags on state property be flown at half-staff in memory of those killed and injured during the terror attacks in Paris.

The flags are to remain flying at half-staff through 5 p.m. Thursday, according to the governor's order. Friday night's mass killings in Paris left at least 129 people dead and injured about 350 others. The Islamic State group claimed responsibility for the coordinated assault by gunmen and bombers.

Fallin had earlier ordered that American and Oklahoma flags be flown at half-staff Wednesday to honor Master Sgt. Joshua L. Wheeler, who was killed last month while on active duty in Iraq. His burial will be Wednesday at Arlington National Cemetery.

Wheeler, who grew up in Roland, was identified as the first American soldier to die in combat against the Islamic State group in Iraq and applauded as a hero by Defense Secretary Ash Carter.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today urged President Barack Obama to suspend accepting Syrian refugees into the United States in the wake of deadly terror attacks in Paris being linked to the Islamic State.

“The Obama administration needs to assure the public that the background checks they are doing are rigorous, and that American lives will not be endangered in the process,” said Fallin. “Until then, I call on the Obama administration to suspend any Syrian refugees into the United States. During these uncertain times, the Obama administration needs to make sure those entering the United States are not terrorists.”

During a U.S. Senate Homeland Security Committee hearing last week, FBI Director James Comey said there is a risk bringing anybody in from the outside, but especially from a conflict zone like Syria.

WHEN they passed the Affordable Care Act, Democrats in Congress believed the law would grow more popular as people started receiving benefits. Instead, opposition remains as strong as ever, and opponents have the upper hand even in states that embraced Obamacare.

Take Kentucky, which was the only Southern state to expand Medicaid under the health law and run a state exchange where people could purchase Obamacare policies. The state's uninsured rate fell from 20.4 percent in 2013 to 11.9 percent by mid-2014.

Yet the people of Kentucky have now elected a Republican governor, Matt Bevin, who promised to turn the state exchange over to the federal government and also campaigned on rolling back Medicaid expansion in some fashion.

The reason for that outcome is simple: Obamacare's costs are exceeding its alleged benefits. Taxpayer expenses are

Gov. Mary Fallin has rolled out an $892 million turnpike plan to improve roads across the state, including several critical projects for the Tulsa area.

The most innovative part of the plan is a 2.5-mile stretch of the Gilcrease Expressway in northwest Tulsa, including a bridge across the Arkansas River.

The city and the Indian Nations Council of Governments have been slowly inching forward on Gilcrease construction for years, but the river crossing always has been the roadblock to completion. Its expense simply is beyond the ability of local government to pay for it in any timely fashion.

A toll bridge, combined with innovative bond funding through the Oklahoma Department of Transportation gets the project closer to completion. Oklahoma Transportation Secretary Gary Ridley says construction on

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin issued the following statement on today's decision by President Obama's administration to reject the application for the Keystone XL Pipeline:

"It continues to be absolutely mind-boggling that President Obama and his administration will not approve the Keystone XL Pipeline. It's an important driver of economic growth and even President Obama's State Department says it will create over 42,000 jobs. It will also support North American Energy production, which is good for both our economic security and our national security.

"Hopefully, future leadership in the White House will reverse this decision and make energy policy based on common sense instead of political pressure from anti-fossil fuel extremists."

The Oklahoman Editorial: Reading Scores Show Oklahoma Retention Policy Working

by The Oklahoman Editorial Board

Published: November 3, 2015

WE'VE had reason to criticize the state of education in Oklahoma, so it's a pleasure when we can highlight improvement. That's the case with the recent release of the 2015 National Assessment of Educational Progress reading scores, which showed Oklahoma experienced the third-largest gain nationally in fourth-grade reading scores. We only hope lawmakers will now protect the reforms that made this improvement possible.

In 2011, at the prompting of Gov. Mary Fallin and then-state schools Superintendent Janet Barresi, the Legislature passed a law requiring students to repeat the third grade if they read at a first-grade level or lower. Status-quo forces vocally opposed the retention law, which took full effect for students taking tests in spring 2014. Critics claimed retention would only stigmatize children and no meaningful education

Building a More Competitive Oklahoma, One (Giga) Bit at a Time

In Oklahoma, my administration has focused on diversifying our economy, building our workforce and educating our citizens. We have worked to build an Oklahoma that attracts companies and new industries. I'm happy to say we are succeeding. To continue building on what makes the Sooner State great, we must continue encouraging investments in our technology infrastructure.

President Reagan once said, "There are no great limits to growth because there are no limits of human intelligence, imagination and wonder." I believe access to technology is an essential tool to achieve this vision and help communities expand their economic potential. Government leaders, educators, the Oklahoma Department of Commerce, state and local chambers of commerce and policy organizations agree: Oklahoma needs networks of ultra-fast, reliable and accessible broadband.

Widespread high-speed broadband can boost local economies in many ways. Investment in physical

Oklahoma consistently ranks among the most food-insecure states in the nation, with more than 656,000 Oklahomans at risk of hunger every day. This year, the governor's goal was to raise two million meals to help feed hungry Oklahoma families, children and seniors. Preliminary numbers confirm the governor has surpassed this year's goal.

"I am continually impressed by the support and generosity shown by Oklahomans in all 77 counties," Fallin said. "I want to especially thank all the sponsors and the caring people who donated their time and resources to help feed our Oklahoma neighbors during the holiday season."

“Today’s announcement that Google is exploring bringing Fiber to Oklahoma City is further validation of the success of our ongoing efforts to bring and keep high-tech companies and entrepreneurs to our great state,” said Fallin. “Google has been an Oklahoma company since 2011, when it invested more than $700 million in its data center in Mayes County. Gov. Fallin Directs State Agencies to Sell Underutilized Property, Buildings

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today filed an executive order directing state agencies to dispose of any underused property and buildings to generate revenue to pay for the maintenance of state buildings and help offset projected state revenue shortfalls. Her order includes undeveloped land as well as unused or underused office buildings, warehouses and residences.

Agencies have successfully identified and sold unused or underused assets in the past. For example, in July of this year the Department of Human Services sold the former Laura Dester Center property to the city of Tulsa for $955,000. Half of the buildings on the campus were considered underutilized; annual savings as a result of selling those underutilized buildings and not having to pay for such things as maintenance, utilities and landscaping is estimated between $50,000 and $63,000.

The plans are to include an explanation of how the dollars saved from the reduction will be reallocated to other needs within the agency. The written spending cut plans are due to each agency's respective Cabinet secretary by Dec. 1, according to Executive Order 2015-46 (see attached).

The governor also placed a moratorium on nonessential, taxpayer-funded, out-of-state travel for all state

I'm sad to see him go, but glad he has found an exciting opportunity in the private sector."

Gov. Fallin Bets on OU in Red River Rivalry with Texas Gov. Abbott

10/09/2015 11:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – With the Oklahoma Sooners playing the Texas Longhorns at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas this Saturday, Governor Mary Fallin is doubling down on the “Red River Rivalry” by challenging Texas Governor Greg Abbott to a Charity

Showdown. Laying odds on an OU victory, Fallin has wagered that the loser of Saturday's game must donate food to a charity in the opposing governor's state.

If OU wins, Abbott will donate a shipment of Railhead barbecue in Fort Worth to the City Rescue Mission, an Oklahoma City non-profit that partners with the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma to provide meals for the homeless. The donation will support Fallin's ongoing Feeding Oklahoma Food Drive.

If UT wins, Fallin and Head Country Bar-B-Q will sponsor 600 meals to be served at the Capital Area Food Bank in Austin, Texas.

"I felt a little bad about accepting this bet because UT doesn't stand a chance," said

Ten Commandments Monument Moves to OCPA

10/06/2015 04:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY—Governor Mary Fallin, state Representative Mike Ritze and the Oklahoma Council of Public Affairs (OCPA) announced today the relocation of the Ten Commandments monument from the Oklahoma State Capitol to OCPA's campus, located on private property ten blocks south of the capitol complex.

The Oklahoma Supreme Court ordered the monument to be removed from the Capitol grounds in June, saying the Oklahoma Constitution prohibited the state from displaying it. The state appealed that decision but could not get the Supreme Court ruling overturned.

Fallin thanked OCPA for housing the monument and said she would work with lawmakers to put a proposed Constitutional change to a vote of the people, allowing the monument to eventually return to the Capitol.

“My thanks go out to OCPA for providing a temporary home for the Ten Commandments Monument that is easily accessible to those visiting the State Capitol,” said

Workplace Silence Leads to Violence; Speak Out and Help Reduce Domestic Violence in Oklahoma

By: Governor Mary Fallin and Oklahoma Verizon President Kristi Crum

Domestic violence affects one in four women. Sadly, Oklahoma is ranked sixth in the nation in the number of women murdered by men. This epidemic affects people of all demographics and communities, extending from the home to the workplace.

Statistics like these are why the state of Oklahoma and Verizon have participated in raising awareness on these issues year after year in conjunction with Domestic Violence Awareness Month.

Oklahoma recently dropped from third to sixth in the national ranking, but domestic violence is still prevalent. Employers, including both the state of Oklahoma and Verizon, have a very real stake in protecting their employees from this scourge. The Center for Disease Control and Prevention estimates the annual cost of lost productivity in the workplace from domestic violence at more than $7 million. More than 74 percent of

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin has issued a 37 day stay of Richard Glossip’s execution to address legal questions raised today about Oklahoma’s execution protocols. The stay will give the Department of Corrections and its attorneys the opportunity to determine whether potassium acetate is compliant with the state’s court-approved execution procedures.

“Last minute questions were raised today about Oklahoma’s execution protocol and the chemicals used for lethal injection,” said Fallin. “After consulting with the attorney general and the Department of Corrections, I have issued a 37 day stay of execution while the state addresses those questions and ensures it is complying fully with the protocols approved by federal courts.”

The new execution date will be Friday, November 6.

Tulsa World Editorial: Board of Corrections Gives Credit Where Credit's Due, and Follows the Law

09/25/2015 11:15 AM CDT

The Oklahoma Board of Corrections should be applauded, not pilloried, for making a common-sense and absolutely correct decision to follow the law and reduce the state prison population.

The policy change, long overdue and recommended by the governor as well as independent justice reform evaluators, could save the agency at least $2.3 million over the next 18 months, incentivize inmates to follow rules and make prisons safer for corrections workers.

More than 8,000 inmates are serving sentences for convictions serious enough that they cannot be considered for parole until they reach the 85 percent mark in their sentence. A corrections department rule also prevented them from accruing good-behavior credits until the 85 percent mark instead of accruing credits throughout their sentence. As a consequence, some inmates served up to 93 percent of their sentence, at a significant cost to the state.

Insure Oklahoma Now Accepting Larger Businesses

09/21/2015 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin and the Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA) announced today that the Insure Oklahoma program is increasing its employer size limit from 99 to 250 employees. The change is effective immediately.

Insure Oklahoma is the state’s premium assistance program that helps businesses and their middle- to low-income employees afford health insurance coverage. Insure Oklahoma’s funding levels can support premium assistance for about 30,000 individuals. Increasing the employer size limit to 250 employees, which is authorized under the program’s federal waiver, would allow Insure Oklahoma to maximize program usage.

Insure Oklahoma launched in 2005 with an initial employer size limit of 25 employees. This is the third time the size limit has been increased.

Governor Mary Fallin said increasing the eligibility limit to 250 employees is part of the state’s efforts to be more business-friendly,

The governor in April tapped Askins, a former Oklahoma lieutenant governor, to oversee implementation of the Pinnacle Plan, the Oklahoma Department of Human Services’ (DHS) ongoing effort to reform the state's child welfare operations.

“I appreciate Jari’s hard work these past six months to improve child welfare services and to serve as my special adviser,” said Fallin. “She made a lot of progress in a very short period of time to ensure the Pinnacle Plan was being implemented appropriately. I wish her well in her new position.”

DHS Director Ed Lake praised Askins and cited several of her accomplishments.

09/16/2015 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued this statement after the Oklahoma Court of Criminal appeals today granted a two-week stay of execution to Richard Glossip:

Gov. Fallin Responds to Request to Delay Execution of Richard Glossip

09/15/2015 09:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the impending execution of Richard Glossip and the request by his attorneys to delay his execution by sixty days. Richard Glossip was convicted of paying to have his boss, Barry Van Treese, beaten to death in 1997.

“For months, and as part of a larger publicity campaign opposing the death penalty, Richard Glossip’s attorneys have been publicly claiming to have new evidence that exonerates their client. During that time, my office and I have urged them to bring that so-called evidence to the proper venue: a court of law. Not only have Glossip’s lawyers not done so, but they have actively rejected requests from public officials to examine whatever materials they have. His attorneys even refused to share the contact information of so-called ‘new witnesses’ with

by The Oklahoman Editorial Board

THE law that changed Oklahoma's workers' compensation system has been challenged in court on many fronts by those who prefer the adversarial, attorney-dominated system that was in place for so many years. Yet there are clear signs the new administrative system is working.

The clearest comes in a report from the National Council on Compensation Insurance, which filed an overall loss cost, or claim expense, decrease of 14.8 percent for Oklahoma. This marks the third straight year of declines in this important indicator — by a total of 37.2 percent according to state Insurance Commissioner John Doak.

What's that mean? The State Chamber of Oklahoma says those figures equal a savings of roughly $148 million for Oklahoma businesses in the

All American and Oklahoma flags on state property are at half-staff until 5 p.m. today to honor the victims of the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on America.

Oklahoma Works: Building a Stronger Workforce and More Prosperous State

09/08/2015 02:15 PM CDT

For the next several weeks, I am traveling across the state in a series of meetings promoting a workforce and education initiative called “Oklahoma Works.”

The meetings, co-hosted by the State Chamber of Oklahoma, promote a much-needed dialogue between education professionals and employers in both the public and private sector. They are designed to answer the questions, “How can state agencies, schools and businesses work together to better prepare students for the workforce?” And “How can we better connect skilled Oklahomans with great jobs and careers?”

We are looking for regionally specific answers, not one-size-fits-all solutions. We know that in some parts of the state major employers are looking for skills that can be translated to advanced manufacturing and aerospace careers; in other areas of Oklahoma, agriculture or energy-industry related skills are in high demand.

The new law will also prohibit anyone from using tobacco in school vehicles and at any school-sponsored or school-sanctioned event or activity, including sporting events. House Bill 1685, also known as the 24/7 Tobacco-Free Schools Act, provides around-the-clock protection from the dangers of tobacco use.

“Tobacco products are the leading cause of preventable death in the state of Oklahoma,” said Governor Mary Fallin. “A lot of tobacco users first form the habit by being around other tobacco users, including friends and parents, when they are young. When I was growing up, it wasn’t unusual to see parents – or high school-aged children – smoking or dipping at sporting events and other school functions. This new law pushes tobacco off our school campuses and ensures our children aren’t picking up an unhealthy and

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today addressed the impending execution of Richard Glossip, a death row inmate convicted of first degree murder. Fallin said the execution, currently set for September 16, will move forward because Glossip is guilty and because, after 17 years of appeals, the legal process has run its course.

Roads to Prosperity: Improving Oklahoma's Transportation Infrastructure

08/04/2015 10:00 AM CDT

Having safe, well-maintained roads and bridges is one of the most basic requirements of a healthy economy. Oklahoma is at the intersection of three major interstate highways, and we rely on a modern, functional and uncongested infrastructure system to transport an enormous quantity of goods across our borders every day. Businesses choose to locate and expand where employees can come and go easily and where they can get their goods to market. Tourists visit (and spend money at) convenient locations that are easily accessible. For commuters, well-maintained roads are a quality-of-life-issue as well as an everyday necessity.

For all those reasons, when I first took office over five years ago I asked Secretary of Transportation Gary Ridley to put in place an aggressive plan to improve and modernize our transportation infrastructure.

That plan began with a commitment to dramatically increasing resources for the Department of Transportation (ODOT), which our “President Obama's ‘Clean Power Plan’ represents one of the most expansive and expensive regulatory burdens ever imposed on U.S. families and businesses,” Fallin said. “The EPA's new rules will have minimal environmental benefits; they will, however, threaten our fuel diversity and lead to significant increases in utility costs across the country.

“Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt has been helping to lead the charge against the White House and the EPA's overreach. I continue to support his efforts in the courtroom. Oklahoma, not the federal government, knows best how to protect our environment while also supporting our

In the wake of a terrorist attack on two military facilities in Chattanooga, Tennessee, Gov. Mary Fallin has authorized Oklahoma National Guard troops to be armed.

Four Marines and a sailor were killed in Chattanooga, the latest in a series of attacks on domestic military facilities by radicalized Muslim terrorists.

Fallin's orders are sensible and appropriate, and the Pentagon ought to consider taking similar steps. It's wrong to put our military personnel into danger without any means of self-defense.

It's important to note that Fallin did not order guardsmen routinely armed. Rather, she authorized Oklahoma's Adjutant

07/21/2015 04:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) has expanded the disaster incident period by 18 days in June to include additional flooding and storm damage to public and private property.

FEMA's Disaster Incident Period of May 5 – June 4 has been extended to June 22 for both Individual Assistance and Public Assistance to reflect damages to public and private property.

Oklahoma Department of Emergency Management (OEM) officials made the extension request last week, stating that Oklahoma has been besieged by severe weather for more than two months. In May, the state experienced more than 25 tornadoes, baseball-size hail and record-breaking rainfall, which set the stage for multiple rounds of flooding and other damaging severe weather that followed.

On June 16, Oklahoma was hit with more flooding, straight-line winds and tornadoes. River levels reached all-time highs in many

The AP: Medicaid enrollment surges under expanded program; states worry about paying for added care

By CHRISTINA A. CASSIDY Associated Press

ATLANTA — More than a dozen states that opted to expand Medicaid under the Affordable Care Act have seen enrollments surge way beyond projections, raising concerns that the added costs will strain their budgets when federal aid is scaled back starting in two years.

Some lawmakers warn the price of expanding the health care program for poor and lower-income Americans could mean less money available for other state services, including education.

In Kentucky, for example, enrollments during the 2014 fiscal year were more than double the number projected, with almost 311,000 newly eligible residents signing up. That's greater than what was initially predicted through 2021. As a result, the state revised its Medicaid cost estimate from $33 million to $74 million for the 2017 fiscal year. By 2021, those costs could climb to a projected $363 million.

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today authorized Oklahoma's adjutant general, Maj. Gen. Robbie L. Asher, to arm full-time personnel at installations like the military facilities that were attacked Thursday in Chattanooga, Tenn.

"Four unarmed Marines were killed in what appears to be a domestic terrorist attack," said Fallin. "It is painful enough when we lose members of our armed forces when they are sent in harm's way, but it is unfathomable that they should be vulnerable for attack in our own communities. For that reason, I want to make sure that our National Guardsmen are authorized to arm themselves at our military facilities."

The industry has also voluntarily cut injection rates at many wells. The state will continue to work with all parties to pursue

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin released the following statement today regarding justice reform concepts outlined by President Barack Obama after his visit to a federal penitentiary in El Reno, Oklahoma:

“While we have our political differences, I appreciate President Obama taking the time to visit Oklahoma and I hope he enjoyed his stay. It is always an honor for Oklahoma to host the president of the United States.

“During his time here, the president focused many of his remarks on our criminal justice system. There is an emerging bipartisan consensus that our justice system must be ‘smart on crime’ as well as tough on crime. For individuals with mental health and addiction issues, for instance, we need to do a better job of offering treatment and supervision as alternatives to prolonged incarceration. The president and I have some common ground on this issue, as do some Republican presidential candidates as

Norcross concluded Oklahoma ranks ninth-best for fiscal solvency, outperforming every state in the region.

The state fared well in several categories. In the area of “cash solvency” — Does a state have enough cash on hand to cover short-term bills?

The Army, which must reduce its active-duty ranks by 40,000, announced today that Fort Sill will gain 219 active-duty slots over the next two years. Posts in other states are absorbing thousands of lost positions.

The Ten Commandments Monument: A Fitting Tribute to History and Shared Values

07/07/2015 01:15 PM CDT

In 2009, Governor Brad Henry signed a bill allowing the installation of a small, privately funded Ten Commandments monument outside the Oklahoma State Capitol. Legislators and supporters of the monument intended it as a tribute to the importance of the Ten Commandments in our history and our system of laws.

Celebrating the historical importance of religions and religious values is not a new idea. Our nation is steeped in references to God and the rights He bestows on all men and women.

The Declaration of Independence clearly states the rights to “life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness” are inalienable and bestowed on all, not by the government or by men, but by our “Creator.” Our currency has the motto “In God We Trust” printed on every bill. The United States Supreme Court

Gov. Fallin Statement on the Future of Oklahoma’s Ten Commandments Monument

07/07/2015 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding Oklahoma’s Ten Commandments monument, which will remain at the Oklahoma State Capitol while legal appeals and potential legislative and constitutional changes are considered:

“The Ten Commandments monument was built to recognize and honor the historical significance of the Commandments in our state’s and nation’s systems of laws. The monument was built and maintained with private dollars. It is virtually identical to a monument on the grounds of the Texas State Capitol which the United States Supreme Court ruled to be permissible. It is a privately funded tribute to historical events, not a taxpayer funded endorsement of any religion, as some have alleged.

“Nevertheless, last week the Oklahoma Supreme Court ruled Oklahoma’s Ten Commandments monument was impermissible. Their decision was deeply disturbing to many in our

Statement on the Supreme Court’s Decision to Overturn EPA Regulations on Power Plant Emissions

06/29/2015 01:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the U.S. Supreme Court’s opinion in Michigan v. Environmental Protection Agency, in which the court struck down certain EPA-imposed regulations on power plant emissions:

“As Justice Scalia noted today, the EPA regulations in question would have imposed a $10 billion a year cost for power plants. The EPA issued these edicts with no thought as to the economic consequences of its regulatory scheme, which would have dramatically raised utility rates. Today’s decision is a victory for American families and businesses that would have faced skyrocketing costs because of unreasonable rules and regulations.”

06/29/2015 11:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin released the following statement today regarding the U.S. Supreme Court opinion in Glossip v. Gross that upheld as constitutional Oklahoma’s lethal injection protocol:

I appreciate the Court’s ruling, which upholds the letter and the spirit of the law as it is written. My thanks go out to Attorney General Scott Pruitt, Solicitor General Patrick Wyrick and their legal team for aggressively and successfully representing the state on this issue.”

The Attorney General’s Office, pursuant to state law, will notify the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals that the court is now able to set execution dates for Richard Glossip, John Marion Grant, and Benjamin Robert Cole.

Governor Mary Fallin Statement on King v. Burwell Ruling

06/25/2015 10:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement in response to the United States Supreme Court’s decision in King v. Burwell:

“The Supreme Court’s decision today in King v. Burwell means that taxpayers will be, for the time being, stuck with a law that is deeply flawed, disruptive to the lives of American families and a destructive force in our economy.

“As I and others have argued for years, states need flexibility to pursue their own health care solutions tailored to the needs of their constituents; Obamacare does the opposite by pursuing one-size-fits-all policies. Health care decisions need to be left to doctors and patients; Obamacare erodes that relationship and replaces it with decisions made by bureaucrats. Successful health care reform would make health care less expensive and would focus on improved health; but Obamacare has led to ballooning insurance premiums shouldered

Gov. Fallin Signs Law Regarding the Release of Police Body Camera Footage

06/04/2015 04:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law a bill that governs the public release of video from body cameras worn by law enforcement officers.

House Bill 1037, which received bipartisan legislative support, was crafted with input from the media, law enforcement officials and prosecutors. All parties agree that some footage from police body cameras should be available to the press and public. However, unlike dashboard cameras on police cars, body cameras enter the homes and private spaces of residents, creating privacy concerns.

HB 1037 allows for the release of body cam videos with some exceptions. A video can be withheld if it depicts a death, unless that death was caused by a law enforcement officer. It also allows the redaction of incidents of great bodily harm and severe violence, unless the acts were caused by law enforcement. It also allows the withholding of footage depicting, nudity, minors, informants, sex crime victims,

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Education Improvement Bills

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed a number of education bills designed to promote early learning and literacy, improve teacher evaluations, and other items.

One closely watched piece of legislation, Senate Bill 630, was signed today. SB 630 extends for three years the use of reading teams meant to evaluate student literacy levels under the Reading Sufficiency Act (RSA). It also begins the use of reading sufficiency teams earlier, in the first grade, to identify children who are struggling to read at grade-appropriate level. Previously, the use of reading teams began in the third grade.

The RSA is designed to ensure that children are able to read at grade-appropriate level before they reach the fourth grade. The RSA uses standardized tests to evaluate student reading performance. SB 630 raises the bar for student literacy, now requiring

Rebuilding After a Month of Storms

06/01/2015 04:15 PM CDT

For many Oklahomans dealing with flooding, storms and tornadoes, May was a difficult month.

In the past few weeks, eleven Oklahomans lost their lives due to storms. In the period from May 5 to May 10 alone, over 828 homes and businesses were damaged or destroyed.

As the waters recede, we know we will find more damage. Already a preliminary survey has identified more than $13 million in uninsured infrastructure losses. In some counties, flooding was so bad that it rendered roads and bridges impassable.

The damage is significant, and recovery will not happen overnight. But it will happen.

Federal, state and local resources are all being used to rebuild and recover. Generous corporations – like Google and Walmart – have donated hundreds of thousands of dollars to relief efforts; and organizations like the Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the Southern Baptists are all providing assistance to those displaced by storms and

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed the Fiscal Year 2016 budget bill (HB 2242) into law, calling it a fiscally responsible blueprint for state government and praising the Legislature for closing a $611 million shortfall without cutting funding for K-12 education. The FY 2016 appropriated budget will be $7,138,920,521, which is $74.3 million, or 1.03 percent, less than FY 2015’s appropriated budget.

“I’m proud legislators and I were able to pass a budget in challenging times that shields common education, our largest and one of our most important expenses, from budget cuts,” said Fallin. “Under this budget, approximately 51 cents of every dollar appropriated by state government will continue to go toward education. The budget also protects – and in some cases increases — funding for health and public safety while preserving all funding necessary to keep intact the state’s eight-year

Gov. Fallin Requests Public Assistance for 16 Counties

05/30/2015 12:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin has requested that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) grant public assistance for 16 counties hit hard by tornadoes and flooding that began May 5. If approved, the designation would deliver federal funding to assist municipalities, counties and rural electric cooperatives with infrastructure repairs, debris removal and costs associated with responding to the storms.

Counties included in the request are: Atoka, Bryan, Cleveland, Cotton, Grady, Haskell, Hughes, Johnston, Latimer, McClain, Okfuskee, Pittsburg, Pontotoc, Seminole, Stephens, and Tillman.

“In counties across Oklahoma, flooding is doing a large amount of damage to roads and bridges, in some cases rendering them impassable,” said Fallin. “I’m asking the federal government to approve this request as quickly as possible so both state and federal aid can be used to support local recovery efforts.”

Gov. Fallin Signs Legislation Reaffirming Corporation Commission as Regulator of Oil, Gas Industry

05/30/2015 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin on Friday signed a bill reaffirming the Corporation Commission as the sole regulator of Oklahoma’s oil and natural gas industry. The bill aims to preserve a unified regulatory framework for the industry and prevent a confusing patchwork of inconsistent municipal regulations across the state.

Fallin said today that Oklahoma has led the nation in developing rigorous standards for oil and gas production. A patchwork of regulations that vary across the state would be inconsistent with the goal of reasonable, easily understood regulations and could damage the state’s economy and environment, she said.

Senate Bill 809 reaffirms that the Oklahoma Corporation Commission is the primary entity charged with establishing a unified regulatory framework for the energy industry, emphasizing environmentally responsible policies. SB 809 prohibits municipalities from issuing moratoriums or bans on construction of the museum. Once built, no state appropriations will be required to fund operations.

Land for the facility has been donated, and an estimated $10 million in exhibits and collections will also be donated, rather than purchased. The Oklahoma Historical Society has secured prominent collections from figures such as Garth Brooks, Will Rogers and Bob Wills, among numerous others.

“The OKPOP Museum will be a tourism destination and a source of economic growth and development for the city of Tulsa,” said Fallin. “It’s another addition to a beautiful city that continues to grow every day.”

SB 839 was authored by House Speaker Jeffrey Hickman and

Statement from Gov. Fallin on Final Waters of the United States (WOTUS) Rule

05/28/2015 12:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) and U.S. Army Corps of Engineers' (Corps) release of their final rules defining what constitute "Waters of the United States" (WOTUS) under the Clean Water Act.

"Two things are immediately clear about the EPA's new WOTUS rules. First, they represent the expansion of federal power over the nation's waters at the expense of property owners and states. Second, the EPA released these without regard to state or local interests, and oftentimes in direct opposition to the will of states that expressed concern and alarm over the nature of these rules.

"I continue to believe these rules will have a negative impact on economic development, and will slow down improvements and installation of critical infrastructure. Because of the flawed development of these rules and lack of a

Gov. Fallin Announces Job, Resource Fairs Scheduled in Enid, Tulsa

05/28/2015 12:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today announced that Oklahoma Job and Resource Fairs will be held next month in Enid and in Tulsa.

Job and resource fairs are scheduled for June 3 in Enid at Autry Tech and June 9 in Tulsa at Tulsa Tech's Lemley campus. Both events are from 11 a.m. until 2 p.m.

The events are part of a series of job and resource fairs being held across the state as part of Governor Fallin's "Oklahoma Works initiative." The initiative seeks to support private and public efforts to give Oklahomans the work skills and education they need to find good-paying, fulfilling careers. It's also to ensure that Oklahoma businesses have the access they need to the educated and skilled workforce that today's modern economy demands.

The job fairs are also designed to help those who may have been directly affected by the recent loss of some Oklahoma energy sector jobs as well as those who have been displaced

OKLAHOMA CITY -- In light of widespread damage to roads and bridges caused by recent flooding, Governor Mary Fallin has instructed the Oklahoma Department of Transportation (ODOT) to expedite bidding on county infrastructure projects and to explore additional means of supporting recovery efforts. Fallin also said that the extent of the recovery effort would not be known until flooding recedes.

“Right now, we don’t know the full extent of county-level needs because we don’t know the full extent of the flood damage,” said Fallin. “We won’t know that until the water levels recede.

“We do know, however, that there will be infrastructure needs on the local level and that the state needs to play an active role in helping the counties any way we can. OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement on the Memorial Day Holiday.

Gov. Fallin Signs Bills to Responsibly Reform Wind Industry Incentives

05/20/2015 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today signed two measures aimed at reforming tax incentives and credits currently available to the Oklahoma wind energy industry.

Senate Bill 498 phases out the current property tax exemption for wind facilities. SB 502 makes wind facilities ineligible for a job creation tax credit currently offered by the state. A zero emissions tax credit currently available to the wind industry will remain in place.

The governor said phasing out some – but not all – wind energy tax credits will reduce the fiscal burden on the state while still ensuring that Oklahoma’s wind energy industry continues to grow and thrive.

The Wind Coalition, a group of wind developers with a presence in Oklahoma, worked closely with legislators and the governor's office to craft the final agreement.

“When these tax credits were originally conceived, they were meant to support a new and

Governor Mary Fallin, Legislative Leaders Reach Budget Deal

05/19/2015 03:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Mary Fallin, Senate President Pro Tempore Brian Bingman and House Speaker Jeffrey W. Hickman today announced an appropriated state budget agreement for Fiscal Year 2016.

Under the agreement, the FY 2016 appropriated budget will be $7,138,920,521, which is $74.3 million, or 1.03 percent, less than FY 2015's appropriated budget.

The agreement preserves current funding levels for common education, a major victory considering the state had $611 million less in certified revenue available this legislative session than was appropriated in FY 2015. Education continues to be the state's largest investment, with more than 50 percent of all appropriated dollars going toward education expenses.

Other agencies protected from appropriation reductions through flat or increased appropriations include the Department of Corrections, Department of Public Safety, Oklahoma Health Care Authority, Oklahoma Department of

Gov. Fallin Requests Federal Disaster Assistance for Cleveland, Grady and Oklahoma Counties

05/19/2015 03:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today requested a federal disaster declaration for Cleveland, Grady and Oklahoma counties as a result of tornadoes, severe storms and straight-line winds that have occurred since May 5 as well as continued flooding. The designation would provide federal assistance to individuals and businesses in the storm-stricken areas.

In a letter to the president, Fallin wrote that Oklahoma's latest round of record-breaking severe storms began May 5. Since then, the state has experienced widespread flash flooding, damaging winds, baseball-size hail and at least 25 tornadoes. Three Oklahomans lost their lives because of the storms. In addition, 828 homes and businesses were damaged in the storms. Of those, 157 were destroyed and 237 sustained major damage.

Drilling moratorium isn't the answer

By The Oklahoman Editorial Board Published: May 14, 2015

NOTHING short of a drilling moratorium will satisfy those Oklahomans who are alarmed enough about increased earthquake activity that they went to the Capitol this week urging Gov. Mary Fallin to act. Given that some have seen homes and property damaged by quakes, their position is understandable.

Yet the notion that nothing is being done, or that state officials don't care and are turning a blind eye to this issue, is simply not true. Suggestions that this is so only serve to hurt the cause of those seeking change.

Nor is it true that Fallin can impose a moratorium on injection wells in the 16 counties that have seen the most earthquake activity, as the group "Coalition to Stop Induced Seismicity" wants.

The group brought petitions

05/14/2015 09:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced she has named Bob Gilliland chairman of the Oklahoma Workers' Compensation Commission and has tabbed the outgoing chairman to serve as a special commissioner.

Gilliland, of Oklahoma City, was appointed in 2013 as one of three initial members on the Workers' Compensation Commission. He assumes his chairmanship duties June 1.

"Bob has helped craft a fair and efficient way to deal with injured workers on the job," said Fallin. "His knowledge and experience will be very helpful in heading up the commission."

Troy L. Wilson, the first chairman of the commission, announced his resignation last month and that his last day would be May 31. He will serve as special commissioner from June 1 through Aug. 31, 2015.

As special commissioner, Wilson will now hear cases when a member of the commission is disqualified because of a conflict. Fallin has

Gov. Fallin Signs Law to Streamline Transfer of Prisoners from County to State Custody

05/12/2015 06:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law a measure designed to streamline the process of transferring prisoners from county jails to Department of Corrections (DOC) custody.

When a person is sentenced to prison, they are held temporarily in county jail before being transferred into DOC custody to begin their prison sentence. DOC relies on county sheriffs or court clerks to alert the agency that a prisoner is ready for transfer. The agency is not aware that an offender is awaiting transfer until the county delivers the sentencing documents. However, there are no requirements for counties to deliver sentencing documents within a specific time frame.

The lag in communication can prevent DOC from accurately budgeting for offenders and makes the agency unable to provide accurate population and capacity numbers.

Furthermore, DOC is required to pay county jails a per diem fee from the day of an inmate's

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Bill That Extends Abortion Waiting Time

05/06/2015 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed legislation that extends the waiting period for women getting an abortion to 72 hours.

House Bill 1409 increases the time for voluntary and informed consent before an abortion from 24 to 72 hours. Additionally, abortion facilities that operate a website must add a web link to the state's website, "A Woman's Right to Know."

"This legislation will help women get the information they need before making a decision they can't take back," said Fallin. "It will allow for more time to consider medical risks as well as explore alternatives to abortion, such as adoption."

HB 1409 was authored by Rep. Lisa Billy and sponsored by Sen. Greg Treat. HB 1409 takes effect Nov. 1.

When the measure takes effect, Oklahoma will become the fourth state with a 72-hour waiting period.

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Bill to Ban Tobacco from School Campuses

05/06/2015 02:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 1685, requiring all Oklahoma schools to be tobacco-free. The bill is known as the "24/7 Tobacco-Free Schools Act".

Tobacco use of any kind will not be allowed on school grounds and the use of a tobacco product will also be prohibited in school vehicles, and at any school-sponsored or school-sanctioned event or activity.

Many Oklahoma schools have banned tobacco products voluntarily, but HB1965 will make sure that all children will be protected. Prohibiting tobacco use at all times on school grounds protects them from exposure and reinforces for them that most people do not use tobacco products.

“This is a common-sense measure that will reduce tobacco’s influence on our children,” said Fallin. “It is encouraging that 83 percent of Oklahoma’s students already attend schools where tobacco is banned 24 hours a day, seven days a week. This bill

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Texting While Driving Ban

05/05/2015 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 1965, making it illegal to text and drive in Oklahoma. HB 1965 makes texting while driving a primary offense, meaning law officers will be able to pull over anyone who is texting while operating a vehicle. The penalty will be $100.

The governor, during her State of the State address earlier this year, called on lawmakers to pass a texting while driving ban.

“Over a dozen Oklahomans die every year in accidents caused by drivers who are distracted by cell phones,” said Fallin. “Hundreds more are injured. Studies show that driving while texting can actually be more dangerous than driving drunk.”

Fallin said she hopes the law will save lives by changing driver behavior and attitudes regarding texting while driving.

“My hope is that this bill does more than just change the law,” Fallin said. “As a state, we need to change the

Gov. Fallin Signs Law to Seek Improvements in SoonerCare Services for Aged, Blind and Disabled

05/04/2015 05:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 1566, a bill aiming to reduce costs while improving health services provided by the Oklahoma Health Care Authority (OHCA).

HB 1566 directs the OHCA to issue a Request for Proposal (RFP) for care coordination models for the aged, blind and disabled (ABD) Oklahomans who are enrolled in the state’s SoonerCare (Oklahoma Medicaid) program. According to the agency’s Annual Report, the ABDs comprised 16.4 percent of the total SoonerCare enrollment in 2014. The group accounted for 46.6 percent of SoonerCare expenditures.

The first step in this process will be for the OHCA to seek information from advocacy groups, providers, insurers, members and all other interested parties to define the parameters for the RFP. OHCA leadership expects this information gathering phase of the process to take several months and anticipates the RFP to be released in early 2016.

Gov. Fallin Signs Key Sentencing Reform Bill

05/04/2015 04:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed a bill that will allow judges to impose shorter sentences for some nonviolent crimes.

House Bill 1518 allows judges to depart from mandatory minimum terms if they believe the minimum sentence is “not necessary for the protection of the public” and could “result in substantial injustice to the defendant.” Freed from having to impose a mandatory sentence, a judge in some cases could choose to divert the offender to a program to deal with underlying mental health or drug abuse issues. Judges who depart from minimum mandatory sentencing are to file a report with the district court clerk’s office. Court clerks, in turn, will file an annual report with the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals, which will post the information on its website.

The measure, called the Justice Safety Valve Act, is an attempt to divert more nonviolent offenders into alternative programs and away from

Investing in Oklahoma through STEM

By Governor Mary Fallin

Science isn’t just something that happens in labs. It touches every industry in our state and it impacts every Oklahoman. Science, technology, engineering and math (or “STEM”) lead to innovative breakthroughs that improve our quality of life, promote a better-educated workforce, create higher-paying jobs and help Oklahoma retain our most valuable asset – our people.

For that reason, it is important that we keep up with the demand for STEM-educated Oklahomans.

Being STEM-educated requires pursuing education beyond high school: either a traditional four-year college degree, an associate’s degree, or a career tech certificate. Unfortunately, only about half of our population receives any formal education after high school. That means we have a long way to go to fill the state's pipeline for STEM-related jobs. That is especially true given that Oklahoma is expected to have

Governor Mary Fallin Vetoes SB 676, Citing Redundancy and Costs to Taxpayers

Executive Order Has Already Codified State's Opposition to New EPA Carbon Mandates

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today vetoed SB 676, a bill that requires the state of Oklahoma to develop a State Implementation Plan (SIP) to comply with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency's (EPA) proposed rules regarding carbon emissions. To read the veto message, click here.

Fallin said the bill – which has been described as an attempt to fight overbearing EPA regulations – inadvertently does the opposite, at great expense to the state.

SB 676 is designed as a counter to proposed EPA regulations that mandate a 30 percent reduction in carbon dioxide emissions from power plants in each state. The EPA has asked each state to develop a SIP – a state-based plan for compliance.

The bill states, “No regularly licensed, ordained or authorized official of any religious organization shall be required to solemnize or recognize any marriage that violates the official's conscience or religious beliefs.”

Fallin said the bill was an important measure protecting the Constitutional and religious rights of Oklahomans.

“This bill makes it clear that the government can never compel our religious leaders or houses of worship to act in violation of their faith where marriage is concerned,” said Fallin. “I am proud to join our Legislature in taking a strong stand in defense of religious liberty and the freedoms awarded to all American citizens by the U.S. Constitution.”

Gov. Mary Fallin Signs Bill Allowing Medical Trials of Non-Intoxicating CBD Oil for Sick Children

04/30/2015 11:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 2154, authorizing a medical pilot program allowing the medically supervised use of cannabidiol (CBD), a low THC non-intoxicating derivative of marijuana. Reports from some families indicate that CBD may be used to effectively treat children who suffer from epileptic seizures and help reduce the number and intensity of those seizures.

HB 2154 was authored by Rep. Jon Echols and Sen. Brian Crain. The bill is known as “Katie and Cayman’s Law,” named after a young relative of Echols and a family-friend of Crain, both of whom suffer from seizures.

“This bill will help get sick children potentially life-changing medicine,” said Fallin. “By crafting the legislation in a way that allows for tightly controlled medical studies, we can ensure we are researching possible treatments in a responsible and scientific way.”

Governor Mary Fallin Issues Order Standing up to EPA Overreach

04/28/2015 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued an executive order stating that Oklahoma will not file a State Implementation Plan (SIP) with the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) regulating carbon dioxide emissions produced by Oklahoma power plants. The order also requests Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt “take such action as is necessary to enforce the rights of the State of Oklahoma and its citizens from such federal actions as may impact the freedoms of its people.”

In 2013, President Obama directed the EPA to issue sweeping and unprecedented regulations regarding carbon emissions, citing the federal Clean Air Act section 111(d) as his legal authority. The authority of the EPA to issue such rules has been called into question by attorneys general in a number of states, including Oklahoma.

The EPA’s proposed rules would require states to

Gov. Fallin Signs Legislation Empowering Workforce Council

04/27/2015 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed legislation streamlining the composition of the Governor’s Council on Workforce and Economic Development. The Council on Workforce and Economic Development is one of the main state bodies working to implement Oklahoma Works, Fallin’s initiative to help boost educational attainment in Oklahoma. Fallin discussed Oklahoma Works at length in her State of the State address this year, laying out her plan to develop and support partnerships between local businesses, career tech, higher education and K-12 schools. The initiative focuses on regional key economic networks that will collaborate to find solutions to local problems and obstacles. Solutions include local

Gov. Fallin Signs Tax Incentive Evaluation Bills, Dedicates Legislation to Late Rep. David Dank

04/27/2015 02:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed legislation that will require all business tax incentives to be objectively evaluated at least once every four years and require future incentives to include measurable goals.

Fallin dedicated Senate Bill 806 and House Bill 2182, which she proposed in her State of the State message earlier this year, to Rep. David Dank, who died earlier this month. Dank was a longtime advocate for tax credit reform in the Legislature.

“These are the tools Oklahoma has needed to sort out effective incentives from ineffective ones so our state can continue to support economic growth in a fiscally responsible manner,” said Fallin.

Tax credits, rebates and other economic incentives total hundreds of millions of dollars annually, but the state has no formal evaluation mechanism to determine their effectiveness.

“We need to ensure the money we are investing in economic incentives and

04/24/2015 02:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed legislation giving school districts throughout the state the ability to expand public education options and create charter schools. Senate Bill 782 amends the current law, which allowed the creation of charter schools only in Oklahoma and Tulsa counties.

“This legislation provides more local control for parents and school administrators,” said Fallin. “Increasing education options will give students greater opportunities to succeed in the classroom and allow students to graduate with skill-sets necessary to go to college or into a career.”

SB 782 will give parents and school boards greater opportunity to address the educational needs of young people. Charter schools give parents more choices for their children and encourage innovation.

SB 782 was authored by Sen. Clark Jolley and House Speaker Pro Tem Lee Denney. It will take effect 90 days after the Legislature

04/24/2015 01:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed a bill that requires state agencies to use performance-informed budgeting techniques, which was one of her key legislative priorities.

Senate Bill 189 changes the budgeting process to align resources with state priorities and measurable outcomes. Lawmakers appropriated money in 2012 to purchase software to develop the new process.

“Performance-informed budgeting moves Oklahoma from funding programs we think might work to funding programs we know do work,” said Fallin. “This bill will help to ensure that government is allocating taxpayer resources wisely and delivering tangible, measurable results.”

The governor identified implementing a performance-informed budgeting system as a priority during her State of the State address to lawmakers earlier this year.

The website is a result of the work of the Coordinating Council on Seismic Activity. In September 2014, Governor Fallin directed Oklahoma Secretary of Energy and Environment Michael J. Teague to lead the Coordinating Council to organize state resources and activities related to Oklahoma’s recent increase in seismic activity. The body’s primary responsibility is to work cooperatively to develop solutions, identify gaps in resources and coordinate efforts among state agencies, researchers and the state’s oil and gas industry.

“This website will help provide Oklahomans with up-to-date and timely information about our ongoing earthquake response,”

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Bill Expanding Execution Alternatives

04/17/2015 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 1879, a measure allowing the state to perform executions through nitrogen hypoxia if the current method of execution – lethal injection – is ruled unconstitutional or becomes unavailable. The United States Supreme Court is currently reviewing Oklahoma’s lethal injection protocols.

Under current Oklahoma law, if lethal injection is ruled unconstitutional or otherwise becomes unavailable, the state can revert to the electric chair as a second alternative and firing squad as the third alternative for capital punishment. HB 1879 makes nitrogen hypoxia the second alternative, electric chair the third and firing squad the final alternative.

Nitrogen hypoxia causes a quick loss of consciousness and then death from lack of oxygen.

After signing the bill, Fallin reiterated her support of the death penalty for especially brutal murders.

Honoring the Oklahoma Standard

By Governor Mary Fallin

Twenty years ago, on April 19th, I was serving as Oklahoma’s lieutenant governor.

That morning, I was in downtown Oklahoma City with over 1,000 attendees at the Metro Prayer Breakfast. We prayed, read Scripture and heard from speakers who gave testimony to the incredible things God had done in their lives. Little did we know how heavily we would need to lean on our faith and the strength of God to get us through what was about to happen.

At 9:02 that morning, Timothy McVeigh detonated a truck bomb that destroyed the Murrah Federal Building. It was a horrific act of evil and terrorism that took the lives of 168 men, women and children and shook our state to the core.

The sense of loss that day was indescribable. What can you say to someone who has just lost their mother, their father or a spouse? What do you tell a parent who has just lost a child because a daycare

Rx Drug Bill First Bill to be Signed in 2015 Legislative Session

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed legislation taking aim at Oklahoma's prescription drug abuse problem, the first bill to be signed into law in 2015. House Bill 1948 seeks to reduce "doctor shopping," the practice of going to multiple physicians with requests for prescription narcotics, and to reduce the reliance on and inappropriate use of dangerous narcotics to treat pain. The law requires doctors to check a Prescription Monitoring Program (PMP) database before writing prescriptions for potentially dangerous and addictive drugs like oxycodone. By checking the database, doctors can reduce the likelihood that patients are seeking the same prescription drugs from more than one physician at a time.

“Sadly, prescription drug abuse in Oklahoma is nothing short of an epidemic,” said Fallin. “There are more fatal

Latest figures show 32.2 percent of Oklahomans are obese. The governor said she would like to reduce that to 29.7 percent by 2017. The Governor's Council on Fitness, Sports and Nutrition could be a tremendous help in attaining that goal.

With every challenge comes an opportunity and, as one of my favorite sayings goes, “setbacks are opportunities for comebacks.” Fifty dollar a barrel oil prices and a $611 million budget shortfall certainly qualify as challenges, even setbacks, but they are ones that we can overcome. This year we have a tremendous opportunity to carefully rethink how we put together the state’s budget and to address cyclical and structural imbalances that threaten the stability of state finances.

It is important to keep this shortfall in context. This is not the first or the largest budget shortfall the state of Oklahoma has had in recent memory. In 2010, during the national recession, we had a billion dollar shortfall. The sky did not fall.

In 2011, when I took office, I inherited a $500 million shortfall. At the time, we had very few tools

WHAT does reducing or eliminating state agency “swag” expenditures have to do with filling an Oklahoma budget hole that has grown to a whopping $611.3 million?

Some might say not much. After all, the amount identified by state Finance Secretary Preston Doerflinger from fiscal year 2014 — $28.5 million — wouldn’t do much to fill the hole that lawmakers face.

But to dismiss Doerflinger’s attack on swag is to endorse the status quo, and state government can’t afford to do that any longer.

The categories in the budget system that produce the $28.5 million total include promotional expenses and “Exhibitions, Shows and Special Events.” These are ways that state agencies make their services known to wider audiences. Agencies need to advertise their services — the Department of

By Governor Mary Fallin

The New Year has started, which means it’s time for our New Year’s resolutions! My goal as governor has always been simple: to raise the standard of living in Oklahoma by creating more and better jobs. We’ve been largely successful, as Oklahoma’s unemployment rate has continued to fall and per capita income growth has risen at a rate of fifteen percent, the second highest in the nation.

That doesn’t mean we can’t do better, however. In fact, I believe there are three big areas that we need to improve for our state to continue its remarkable forward momentum. My New Years’ resolution for Oklahoma is to improve outcomes in each of the following areas, so that we can build stronger communities for generations to come.

First, we must increase educational attainment. Individuals need to have marketable work skills to flourish in today’s

I’m glad to see what I call the Oklahoma Comeback pick up more steam this year. As a state we have many things to be thankful for this holiday season.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding President Obama's plan to grant amnesty to up to five million illegal immigrants in the United States:

"The United States is a nation of immigrants, and I am proud that people from all across the world want to come here to enjoy our freedoms and our prosperity. We are also a nation of laws. Like all nations, the U.S. has borders. Those laws and those borders must be respected, for reasons ranging from national security to economics to health.

"President Obama's decision to circumvent a newly elected Congress and grant amnesty to 5 million illegal immigrants undermines the rule of law. The EPA and Corps proposal will expand federal jurisdiction of navigable waters nationwide and will require additional permitting for development in areas near water bodies.

"The EPA and the Corps are imposing an additional layer of bureaucracy instead of providing common sense and clarity in the WOTUS proposal," said Fallin. "This proposal is confusing and is going to delay development of critical infrastructure. It also makes development rights of OKLAHOMA CITY – A new report by Standard & Poor’s, a national financial research firm, predicts that Oklahoma will be one of four states to lead the nation in economic growth next year. The report forecasts how the national economy is expected to fare through the remainder of this year and into the next. It predicts Oklahoma’s economic output will grow by more than 3.5 percent.

Governor Mary Fallin said the report was another sign that Oklahoma’s economy is once again moving in the right direction and continues to grow.

“This report from Standard & Poor’s is another indication that Oklahoma’s economy is back on track and our families and businesses are doing better,” said Fallin. “Since 2011 we’ve created over 102,000 jobs, seen median household income grow at twice the national average, and replenished the Rainy Day Fund from just $2.03 to over $530 million. Our job now

Governor Mary Fallin Calls for White House to Issue Comprehensive Plan to Fight Ebola

10/16/2014 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today called on President Obama to release a comprehensive plan to fight Ebola.

“Oklahoma is doing everything it can to prepare for any potential threat of Ebola,” said Fallin. “Our state agencies are coordinating with health care professionals; our hospitals are preparing themselves to isolate and treat any potential outbreaks; and protocols are being updated and reviewed.

“What is lacking now is a commitment from our federal partners to establish a comprehensive plan to reduce risk for our citizens. Travelers, including non-citizens, are coming and going freely from Ebola-infected hot zones to the United States. Security and screening measures at international airports have widely been reported to be inadequate. Our lack of border security, particularly at the Southern border, means we have no real way of knowing who is coming into this country or whether or not they are

State Regents Certify PASS Standards, Oklahoma to Reapply for No Child Left Behind Waiver

10/16/2014 11:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – The Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education today certified Oklahoma’s PASS academic standards as “college and career ready.” That certification is a benchmark meant to ensure that Oklahomans graduating from high school have demonstrated proficiency in subject matter that prepares them both for entry level college courses and career-relevant skills. The certification is also significant because the U.S. Department of Education uses “college and career ready” certification as a qualifier for states to apply for a waiver to the federal No Child Left Behind education law. Reestablishing Oklahoma’s waiver, which it lost in response to the state’s decision to repeal Common Core, would ensure that Oklahoma schools retain control over up to $30 million in federal funds.

“The aerospace industry in Oklahoma continues to expand, underscored today by NORDAM’s announcement regarding its partnership with Pratt & Whitney Canada and Gulfstream which will create 300 new jobs at its facilities in Tulsa. NORDAM is an Oklahoma-founded company that has grown to become a global leader in aerospace. Still managed by Oklahomans, the company is not only a major asset to Tulsa but to our entire state.

“NORDAM’s consistent success is a reflection on Oklahoma’s pro-business climate and our ability as a state to

State Struggling to Pay for Current Medicaid Costs; Obamacare Expansion Would Be Irresponsible

10/15/2014 01:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today reiterated her opposition to the Medicaid expansion in Obamacare after the Oklahoma Health Care Authority reported that it would need an additional $164 million to maintain Medicaid at its current level. Read more here.

“There are currently 818,000 Oklahomans on Medicaid,” said Fallin. “These are low-income Oklahomans, children, pregnant women, the elderly and people with disabilities. Because of the sky-rocketing cost of medical care, and the failure of Obamacare to bend that cost curve, states are increasingly struggling just to keep these individuals covered.

“The Oklahoma Health Care Authority estimates we need $164 million more just to cover our current obligations. I am committed to finding the resources we need to ensure that

Governor Mary Fallin Announces Appointment to Grand River Dam Authority

10/14/2014 02:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the appointment of Joe Vandevier to the Grand River Dam Authority (GRDA). He is replacing Allen Wright, whose term expired.

Vandevier will serve a five-year term ending in August 2019, and will represent industrial and commercial customers.

He is the founder and current managing member of Downhole Dynamics, a company that provides business and technical consulting for enhanced production in the oil and gas industry.

“Joe Vandevier’s experience in management, business development and engineering brings a valuable perspective to the GRDA,” said Fallin. “His leadership and dedication will serve the GRDA and its members well.”

Vandevier has worked in a variety of key roles in the oil and gas industry for the last 40 years. He was vice president of operations in the U.S., Canada and Russia for Centrilift. He also served as president and chief operating

Governor Mary Fallin Thanks Deaconess Hospital after Ebola Threat Ruled Out

10/10/2014 11:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement after Deaconess Hospital in Oklahoma City confirmed a patient being monitored for Ebola-like symptoms was not at risk of contracting the virus. There are currently no patients identified as Ebola threats in the state of Oklahoma.

“I am relieved – as is everyone – that the sick patient at Deaconess Hospital is not at risk for the Ebola virus.

“My thanks go out to the staff at Deaconess for their professionalism and their preparation. Oklahoma health care professionals know that Ebola is a risk. They are trained to respond to Ebola threats, to treat Ebola patients and to isolate and contain any infectious diseases.

“Today that training paid off. Hospital officials coordinated with the Oklahoma State Department of Health and the Center for Disease Control to ensure all proper protocols and safety precautions were followed. Should this have

Governor Mary Fallin Praises $1.3 Billion Koch Nitrogen Investment in Oklahoma

10/09/2014 03:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued a statement celebrating today’s groundbreaking of a $1.3 billion expansion of Koch Nitrogen’s plant in Enid, Oklahoma. Koch Nitrogen currently employs approximately 2100 Oklahomans.

“Today’s groundbreaking represents a billion dollar investment in the state and the people of Oklahoma. Koch Nitrogen is a large Oklahoma employer and I am grateful for its continued confidence in our workforce and our continued economic growth.

“Four years ago I took office and began pushing pro-growth economic policies that would deliver an economic environment conducive to job creation, business retention and business expansion. This major investment in the state – along with the more than 102,000 jobs created since 2011 – demonstrates that those policies are working and benefitting people and communities across Oklahoma.” – Governor Mary Fallin

Calling on all Oklahomans to Help Fight Hunger

10/06/2014 05:00 PM CDT

The holiday season is right around the corner, and Oklahomans are preparing to spend time with their family and count God’s blessings. For many of us that means enjoying large, home-cooked meals.

This year, as we plan for Thanksgiving and Christmas dinners, I am asking all Oklahomans to remember the approximately 675,000 people in the state who struggle with hunger daily.

Approximately 13 percent of Oklahomans are classified as “food insecure,” meaning they don’t know where their next meal will come from. That includes one in four Oklahoma children.

All Oklahomans can do their part to drive those numbers down. Last week I announced the kick-off of the fifth annual Feeding Oklahoma Food Drive. This year we have our most ambitious goal yet: raising 2 million meals to help feed Oklahoma families, children and seniors.

The drive runs through October 31 and will benefit the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma, the

Gov. Fallin Responds to SCOTUS Decision to Allow Gay Marriage

10/06/2014 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement in response to the United States Supreme Court’s decision to reject the appeal of a lower court ruling striking down an Oklahoma constitutional provision defining marriage as the union between one man and one woman. The Oklahoma amendment passed in 2004 by a vote of the people, with over 75 percent of voters supporting it.

“The people of Oklahoma have the right to determine how marriage is defined. In 2004, Oklahomans exercised that right, voting by a margin of 3-1 to define marriage as the union of one man and one woman.

“The will of the people has now been overridden by unelected federal justices, accountable to no one. That is both undemocratic and a violation of states’ rights. Rather than allowing states to make their own policies that reflect the values and views of their residents, federal judges have inserted themselves into a state

OSDH Monitoring Ebola Situation in Dallas

No Immediate Threat Exists To Oklahoma Residents

OKLAHOMA CITY – The Oklahoma State Department of Health (OSDH) is reassuring the public that no immediate threat exists to Oklahoma residents from the Ebola case confirmed at a hospital in Dallas. At this time, the case is isolated and transmission of the disease cannot occur without direct contact with the blood or body fluids of an infected patient. OSDH officials will continue to work with hospitals and provide up-to-date communication, guidance and tools to ensure the safety and well-being of citizens.

Since the Ebola epidemic escalated in West Africa this summer, the OSDH began communicating status updates and CDC guidance to Oklahoma healthcare providers and hospitals.

"We will continue to work with medical providers and hospitals regarding the use of screening procedures to rapidly identify any potential cases of Ebola virus disease to ensure that

Governor Mary Fallin Comments on Oklahoma Victory in Anti-Obamacare lawsuit

09/30/2014 02:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY— Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding U.S. District Judge Ronald White’s ruling in favor of a 2012 lawsuit filed by the state of Oklahoma. The suit challenges the constitutionality of provisions within the Affordable Care Act (ACA).

“For years, I have argued that Obamacare represents bad policy, irresponsible spending, an outrageous expansion of federal authority into the private sector, and unconstitutional law. Since 2012, the state of Oklahoma has been fighting the implementation of the ACA, both to protect our citizens from the negative effects of this law – including devastating cuts to Medicare -- and to stand up for Constitutional principles.

“Today, Oklahomans won a major victory, as a United States District Court ruled in favor of Oklahoma’s lawsuit challenging the implementation of Obamacare. My thanks go out to Attorney General Scott Pruitt and his team

Governor Mary Fallin Comments on Moore Attack

Perpetrator “will face the full weight of the law”

OKLAHOMA CITY—Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement after Cleveland County District Attorney Greg Mashburn filed charges against the suspected perpetrator of an attack at Vaughan Foods in Moore. The DA indicated he would seek the death penalty.

“The attack at Vaughan Foods was an act of cowardice, brutality and barbarism. The perpetrator of that attack will be brought to justice and face the full weight of the law. My thoughts and prayers continue to go out to the victims of this terrible crime as well as their families.

“Since the attack was reported, I have been communicating with law enforcement as well as Oklahoma’s Department of Homeland Security to ensure a thorough investigation is conducted into the motives of the attacker. That investigation is still ongoing, and it is unclear at this time

Oklahoma Exceeds Complete College America Year-Two Goal

09/25/2014 12:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Committed to help drive the state’s economy by providing a more educated workforce, Oklahoma’s public and private higher education institutions and career technology centers have significantly exceeded their Complete College America (CCA) year-two goal.

Oklahoma’s goal for CCA is to increase the number of degrees and certificates earned by an average of 1,700 per year, from 30,500 annually in 2011 to 50,900 annually by 2023. In year two of the initiative, Oklahoma’s postsecondary institutions surpassed the annual goal, conferring 3,577 additional degrees and certificates. In the first year, the number of degrees and certificates awarded also exceeded the annual goal, increasing by 2,945.

“Oklahoma’s economy is moving in the right direction,” said Governor Mary Fallin. “In fact, since 2011 we’ve been able to create over 100,000 new jobs. For that forward momentum to continue, we know

Gov. Fallin Applauds International Paper for Restarting Idled Operation in Valliant

09/22/2014 09:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin applauded today’s announcement by International Paper that it will restart the previously idled No. 3 machine at its Valliant containerboard mill.

“International Paper’s $90 million investment in McCurtain County will result in dozens of new jobs for Oklahoma families, and make the Valliant mill one of the largest and most efficient containerboard mills in North America,” said Fallin. “Due in part to Oklahoma’s commitment to pro-business, pro-growth policies, we were able to restart the previously idled machine and put Oklahomans back to work.”

The No. 3 machine is scheduled to be operational in the summer of 2015 and will create approximately 65 new jobs. This will also allow the plant to produce an additional 360,000 tons of capacity to produce high quality medium, a packaging material.

“We are excited about the Valliant project.

Governor Mary Fallin Comments on A-F Grades

09/17/2014 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the Oklahoma State Department of Education’s release of the 2014 “A-F” school report cards. Approximately one-third of all schools (646) improved their score in 2014 compared to last year.

“Oklahoma has great teachers and administrators, and they have my thanks for the difficult, important job they are doing.

“The A-F grading system is designed to empower parents by providing them with an easily understood measurement of how a school is performing. This year’s grades demonstrate that Oklahoma has hundreds of “A” schools and many pockets of excellence. It also continues to show – as we have known for years – that there are many schools that are struggling. The superintendents and teachers of schools receiving a D or an F must remember: a bad grade is not a punishment; it is a call to action. Parents should

Governor Thanks Health Care Workers

09/15/2014 10:00 AM CDT

By Andy Rieger Transcript Executive Editor

Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin thanked physicians and other heart-health workers for their part in trying to improve the state's overall health.

Fallin, speaking Friday at a heart health conference sponsored by Norman Regional Health System, said one in four Oklahoma deaths are from cardiovascular diseases.

"It's a killer in our state," Fallin told the guests at Embassy Suites Hotel and Conference Center.

She commended the attendees for taking time to better their education on heart health in order to share best practices with patients. Proper nutrition, smoking cessation and lifestyle changes will make a difference, she said.

"Oklahomans don't always know how to take care of themselves," she said.

Fallin's father died of heart disease in his 50s and her mother later died in her 70s with heart problems.

09/11/2014 10:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the state of Oklahoma has $1.5 million available in drought grants for cities, counties, water districts and other public entities to help fund projects that highlight responsible use of water.

“Responsible use of water remains the most immediate and effective way to prevent future water shortages for many communities and water systems in Oklahoma,” said

Fallin. “As the state enters its fourth year of ongoing drought, water efficiency and the reuse of water are becoming increasingly important to protect the water supplies that communities currently use.”

To receive funding from the Water for 2060 Drought Grant Program this fiscal year, the applicant and the project must both be eligible. Eligible entities include counties, towns and municipalities, public works authorities and rural water/sewer districts.

Grants are capped at $500,000. The deadline for Governor Mary Fallin Orders Flags to Be Flown at Half-Staff to Honor 9/11 Victims

09/11/2014 07:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin has ordered all American and Oklahoma flags on state property to be flown at half-staff from 8 a.m. until 5 p.m. Thursday to honor the victims of the September 11, 2001, terrorist attacks on America.

“September 11 is a day to mourn and remember those who were victims to the worst terror attack in our nation's history,” said Fallin. “As we continue to pray for their families and friends, let us also remember and pay tribute to the heroic actions of first responders and volunteers who acted quickly and selflessly -- sometimes even sacrificing their own lives -- to save others.

“As we look back 13 years ago today, we also should keep in mind our troops who serve in our nation’s military. These brave men and women willingly leave the comfort of their homes to place themselves in harm’s way to ensure the citizens of Oklahoma and the United States can continue to enjoy

Gov. Fallin Announces Record Increases in Education Resources from School Land Holdings

09/10/2014 02:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin announced today that public schools, colleges and universities have received record earnings during the last four fiscal years from funds distributed by the Oklahoma Commissioners of the Land Office (CLO).

More than $519.9 million has been distributed to the CLO’s education beneficiaries during the 2011 through 2014 fiscal years, according to the agency. That amount is 57 percent, or $188.7 million, more than the $331.2 million distributed during the next-highest four-year period in state history (2007-2010).

“This is great news for public education,” said Fallin. “This money provides much-needed additional funds for school districts, colleges and universities. The increase in CLO dollars is one more way to supplement the $150 million increase legislators appropriated for K-12 education in the last two years. I appreciate the hard work of the land office commissioners and CLO Secretary Harry

Oklahoma: Leading the Way towards North American Energy Independence

Oklahoma is an undisputed leader in the energy industry. We are the fourth-largest natural gas producing state in the country, the fifth-largest oil producing state, and the sixth-largest state for wind power.

Some people talk about an “all of the above” energy strategy. Oklahoma is doing it. We are helping to lead an energy revolution that has made North American Energy Independence – once an impossible goal – within reach.

In 2013, Oklahoma produced 111,368 thousand barrels of oil, an increase of 67 percent from 2009. And while we are prospering from an oil boom, we’re also building the infrastructure for alternative energies like natural gas and wind power. Take a drive west along Interstate 40 and you’ll not only have access to the largest number of CNG fueling stations per capita in the country, you’ll also see a rapidly increasing number of wind turbines providing Oklahomans with affordable, reliable

- State agency reform paying off

By World’s Editorial Writers | Posted: Friday, Sept. 5, 2014

Another year, another reduction in workers’ compensation costs.

On Tuesday, the National Council on Compensation Insurance filed the key report used by insurance companies in setting workers’ comp rates in the state. The report shows an overall cost level decrease of 7.8 percent for next year.

Last year’s report had a 14.6 percent cost decline.

This is good news for Oklahoma businesses, and a further sign that the state’s workers’ compensation reform effort is paying off exactly as planned.

The State Chamber of Oklahoma estimates that since workers’ comp reform was passed in the state, Oklahoma businesses have saved more than $220 million. That’s money that employers can use to expand, hire more people, offer

09/04/2014 03:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding a report issued by the Department of Public Safety (DPS) concerning the execution of Clayton Lockett. The report was the result of an independent review, requested by Governor Fallin, of the Lockett execution and the state's execution protocols. It contains suggested updates to Department of Corrections (DOC) execution protocols.

"My thanks go out to Commissioner Michael Thompson and his team for conducting a thorough review of Clayton Lockett's execution. In the coming days and weeks, I expect the Department of Corrections to implement the proposed improvements in protocols to ensure that future executions are performed effectively. In fact, I have been told by DOC Director Robert Patton that his agency has already taken steps to rewrite its execution protocol in a manner that is consistent with these recommendations.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today announced the creation of a Coordinating Council on Seismic Activity to link researchers with policy makers and energy industry experts. The council will be headed by Oklahoma Secretary of Energy and Environment Michael Teague. Fallin's announcement came during the Fourth Annual Governor's Energy Conference, held in Oklahoma City.

"Oklahoma has always had seismic activity," said Fallin. "But the reality is, we are seeing more earthquakes today than we did several decades ago. It's important we study this issue and have sound science that can inform decisions made in both the public and private sector. This new council will link researchers with the energy industry and policymakers to ensure we are maximizing communication and access to information. We can't examine a complex issue like this in a vacuum; everyone needs to be at the same table and talking."

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Vehicle Tag Compact with the Choctaw Nation

09/03/2014 12:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin announced today that the state of Oklahoma has signed a vehicle tag compact with the Choctaw Nation.

The compact, signed during last weekend's Choctaw Nation Labor Day Festival, establishes how the state and tribe will work together to issue Choctaw vehicle tags.

"The state of Oklahoma and the Choctaw Nation already are important partners in economic development, education, health care and transportation infrastructure," said Fallin. "This is just another example of an opportunity for state leaders and tribal leaders to get together to strengthen our partnerships."

Under the compact, Choctaw citizens who want to purchase a Choctaw tag may go to a state tag agent and present their citizenship card. They will pay all the same fees and taxes that a nontribal person would to complete the same transaction.

The Choctaw Nation plans to give its citizens who purchase a

Governor Mary Fallin to President Obama: Stop Playing Politics with Our Children's Education

08/28/2014 02:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today called on the Obama Administration to stop playing politics with children's education and reverse its decision to strip Oklahoma of its No Child Left Behind (NCLB) waiver. The federal government today announced that it would not continue to grant Oklahoma schools a NCLB waiver. The change in designation came in response to the state's decision to repeal the Common Core State Standards and replace them with college and career ready standards developed by Oklahomans. As a result of Oklahoma losing its waiver, schools may have to reexamine their budgets to comply with NCLB federal requirements.

Common Core was repealed when the governor signed bipartisan legislation that passed with overwhelming majorities in the House and Senate (HB 3399 passed 71-18 in the House and 37-10 in the Senate).

"It is outrageous that President Obama and Washington bureaucrats are trying to dictate how Oklahoma

Gov. Fallin and Insurance Commissioner Doak Partner on Earthquake Insurance Education

08/27/2014 10:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin and Oklahoma Insurance Commissioner John D. Doak recently worked together to ensure that Oklahoma consumers receive the most accurate information possible when acquiring earthquake insurance.

Fallin approved an emergency rule adopted by Doak to require all licensed producers and adjusters with the property line of authority to complete one hour of continuing education on the topic of earthquake insurance every two years.

"This emergency rule will ensure insurance agents in our state stay up-to-date on earthquake information," said Fallin. "It's important as the market for earthquake insurance expands in Oklahoma that residents get reliable and accurate information from insurance agents to help them consider whether they need this additional coverage."

"Working with Governor Fallin to approve this rule is an important step for consumers who are seeking clarification on

Improvements to rail crossings planned as ODOT and Gov. Fallin announce $100 million initiative

08/26/2014 03:00 PM CDT

For too many drivers in Oklahoma, a faded railroad crossing sign is their only warning that a 250 ton locomotive is about to cross their path.

Tuesday, Gov. Mary Fallin and the Oklahoma Department of Transportation announced a new initiative to fast-track hundreds of projects to improve more than 300 rail crossings statewide and upgrade safety warning features on rail crossings across Oklahoma. Many of these crossings have only rail crossing signs or faint pavement markings and no flashing lights or cross arms to serve as additional warning for motorists of oncoming trains.

At a press conference Tuesday at the State Capitol, Gov. Mary Fallin was joined by Oklahoma Secretary of Transportation Gary Ridley, ODOT Executive Director Mike Patterson and rail company representatives in announcing the development of a plan for $100 million in improvements to rail crossings across the state. These improvements are being funded through combining proceeds from the

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today applauded the selection of former Lieutenant Governor Jari Askins as interim executive director of the Oklahoma Pardon and Parole Board.

“Jari Askins is a dedicated and universally respected public servant with a keen knowledge of pardon and parole issues,” said Fallin. “Having served in all three branches of government - including as former chairman of the Pardon and Parole Board - she brings a unique perspective and unparalleled experience to the position. I know she will serve the state well as interim executive director.”

Askins, a native of Duncan, served as Oklahoma’s 15th lieutenant governor in 2007. She passed up seeking re-election to run for governor. Askins lost to Fallin in the November 2010 general election.

Askins served as a Stephens County special district judge for eight years, from 1982-1990. In 1991, she was appointed to the Pardon and Parole

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- U.S. Sen. Jim Inhofe (R-Okla.) and Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today praised an announcement from the Department of Defense's (DOD) Defense Logistics Agency to fully and permanently restore the DOD surplus equipment programs that benefit Oklahoma counties, school districts and rural fire departments:

“The notification from the Department of Defense to fully and permanently restore the programs that provide state and local agencies with surplus vehicles and equipment is welcome news and will benefit Oklahoma counties, school districts and rural fire departments,” said Inhofe. “These programs provide critical assistance to state and local agencies that rely on the used equipment to bridge the gap in their equipment needs, including trucks that are needed to help fight wildfires across the state. Governor Mary Fallin Announces Support for Medicinal Use of Non-Intoxicating CBD Oil

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin announced today she would ask lawmakers to work with her in the next legislative session to support legalization of medicinal cannabidiol oil (CBD) on a limited, medically supervised, trial-only basis. CBD is a component in the cannabis (marijuana) plant. Research suggests that it may be effective to treat toddlers with rare conditions that cause seizures and strokes. CBD is an oil; it is not smoked. It is not intoxicating or used as a recreational drug.

“I do not support legalizing the recreational use of marijuana,” said Fallin. “Nor do I support a broadly-defined ‘medicinal’ marijuana use that makes it easy for healthy adults and teenagers to find and buy drugs.”

“I do support allowing potentially life-saving medicine to find its way to children in need. I am very interested in allowing limited, heavily supervised use of non-intoxicating CBD to be delivered on a

Gov. Fallin Releases Challenged Documents

08/11/2014 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released documents that an Oklahoma judge ruled previously are protected through a deliberative process privilege.

Oklahoma County District Judge Barbara Swinton last week refused to reconsider her earlier ruling, which upheld the decision by the governor to withhold certain emails. At issue are 31 documents about a 2011 decision involving Obamacare.

“I firmly believe and the court has affirmed that it is important to protect the legal right of governors to receive candid and private advice,” said Fallin. “However, I am committed to transparency. I have decided to waive the protection provided by the court so the public can understand the process that went into the policy decision not to implement an Obamacare exchange or Medicaid expansion, both of which would be unsustainable costs to the state and bad public policy.”

Swinton ruled earlier that the governor

Gov. Fallin Condemns Black Mass Scheduled for Oklahoma

08/11/2014 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today condemned a scheduled performance of a satanic black mass next month in Oklahoma City.

“This 'Black Mass' is a disgusting mockery of the Catholic faith, and it should be equally repellent to Catholics and non-Catholics alike,” said Fallin. “It may be protected by the First Amendment, but that doesn't mean we can't condemn it in the strongest terms possible for the moral outrage which it is. It is shocking and disgusting that a group of New York City ‘satanists’ would travel all the way to Oklahoma to peddle their filth here. I pray they realize how hurtful their actions are and cancel this event.”

Fallin joins Oklahoma City Archbishop Paul Coakley in criticizing the event, scheduled for Sept. 21 at the Oklahoma City Civic Center. The archbishop said the black mass “is a satanic inversion and distortion of the most sacred beliefs not only of

Gov. Fallin Applauds Koch Jobs Announcement in Enid

08/06/2014 12:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin applauded today’s announcement by Koch Nitrogen Company, LLC that it will begin construction in mid-September on a $1.3 billion expansion project at its Enid facility:

“Koch Nitrogen's $1.3 billion expansion in Enid will mean hundreds of new jobs for Oklahoma families,” said Fallin. “The company's continued commitment to Oklahoma illustrates the success of our pro-growth policies, which include low taxes, sensible regulations and a commitment to public education that produces skilled workers. I am excited that Koch has chosen to make this investment in Oklahoma that will continue to generate even more great jobs and opportunities for our citizens.”

The project will be implemented over the next three years and will increase production capacity by more than 1 million tons per year. The project will employ up to 1,000 contractors during the 18-24 months

Oklahomans Must Care for Oklahoma Children before Illegal Immigrants

08/04/2014 05:15 PM CDT

On June 13, the first bus of illegal immigrant minors, aged 12-17, arrived at Fort Sill, Oklahoma. The state of Oklahoma was given no formal notice, and no chance to object.

After weeks of bad publicity, public outrage and political pressure, the Obama Administration announced this week that the facility will close by Friday, August 8.

That's good news for the people of Oklahoma and the men and women of Fort Sill, who will once again have the full use of their military base for the purpose it was designed for: housing and training soldiers.

What the facility's closure does not mean is an end to the ongoing border crisis, or an end to a broken immigration system that encourages men, women and children to break our laws.

The Fort Sill facility may be closed, but there is no guarantee it will not reopen in the future. In fact, the federal government extended their lease into January of next year,

Governor Mary Fallin: Fort Sill Facility for Unaccompanied Minors to be closed by Friday

But Federal Government Extends Lease on Facility Anyway

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today received notice from the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) that the Fort Sill facility for illegal immigrant minors will be closed on Friday, August 8. The facility has been holding unaccompanied minors who illegally crossed the United States' southern border since June 13.

Fallin said she was pleased by the announcement, but worried the Obama administration might seek to reopen the facility sometime in the future.

"I am pleased that the Obama Administration is finally listening to the people of Oklahoma and acting to close the Fort Sill facility for illegal immigrants. However, I am disturbed the administration chose to renew its lease on the facility, thereby preserving the option of reopening it in the future.

"We know that illegal immigration naturally dips in the

For more than 19 years, workers compensation in Oklahoma was broken. It was failing injured workers, costing employers too much and enriching attorneys. Prior legislatures and governors attempted to repair this broken system, but nothing seemed to work. Until last year, when Gov. Mary Fallin and the Oklahoma Legislature teamed up to pass Senate Bill 1062, the Administrative Workers'

Compensation Act. Their goal was to build a new system, not to put a bandage on a broken one. The work of creating this new system began last summer, and when the doors of the newly created Workers Compensation Commission opened in February, they were ready for a completely new method of handling work related injuries. Not only was the commission ready to handle the caseload, it understood the goal of the

Gov. Fallin Demands Answers from Pres. Obama on Illegal Immigration and Fort Sill

07/28/2014 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – In a letter to President Barack Obama, Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today called on the president to end the “secrecy” surrounding the use of military facilities around the country to hold illegal immigrant minors. One of those facilities, Fort Sill, is located in Oklahoma.

Fallin called on Obama to formally confirm and explain reports that run contrary to the messages his administration has sent to the public. In her letter, Fallin wrote that:

- Vastly more than 1200 illegal immigrants have been held at Fort Sill, despite reports designed to indicate otherwise.
- The majority of the children held at Fort Sill, Oklahoma, will never be deported and will remain in the United

Governor Mary Fallin Announces Appointment to Pardon and Parole Board

07/25/2014 10:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the appointment of Patricia “Patty” High to the Oklahoma Pardon and Parole Board.

Her appointment will take effect Monday. She will replace the late Currie Ballard and will serve the remainder of his term, which expires in January.

High, of Oklahoma City, is an attorney with her own law firm. She handles mostly civil cases and also has been appointed in Oklahoma County District Court to serve as a guardian for infants, minors and others in family domestic cases.

High previously served as a senior criminal felony prosecutor in the Oklahoma County district attorney’s office from 1989 to 2007. Her duties included being the child abuse and sexual assault division chief and serving as special prosecutor in death penalty cases. She also worked in the district attorney’s office that serves Lincoln and Pottawatomie counties.

Here is further evidence that Oklahoma's economy is healthy: The state's unemployment rate dropped to 4.5 percent in June, the lowest it has been in nearly six years.

The state's seasonally adjusted unemployment rate has improved a full point since June 2013.

Only seven states can boast better employment pictures, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. The comparable national rate is 6.1 percent.

There is other recent evidence of the state's prosperity.

Earlier this month, the final revenue report for the state's fiscal year showed that individual income tax receipts were up 7.7 percent compared to last year and state sales tax collections are up 4.2 percent. In other words, more money is being earned and spent in the state. ...

Oklahoma First Gentleman Wade Christensen Chairs Governors' Spouses Leadership Committee

07/22/2014 05:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma First Gentleman Wade Christensen has served as the Chairman of the Spouses Leadership Committee (SLC) over the last year in conjunction with Governor Mary Fallin's chairmanship of the National Governors Association (NGA) and led the spouses Summer Meeting program last week in Tennessee.

As chair, Christensen focused a number of the spouses' business programs on the topic of agriculture, including a session titled "Agriculture and America's Youth: Strengthening Communities." During the sessions, spouses heard from several guest speakers and students on how agriculture has impacted their lives and empowered them to get involved in their communities.

First Gentleman Christensen is a fourth-generation farmer from Thomas, OK. His goal as chair of the SLC was to highlight the important role that farmers and ranchers play in not only feeding America, but also in strengthening the

Oklahoma's Jobless Rate Dips to Lowest Level in Nearly Six Years

07/22/2014 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin said today Oklahoma’s pro-growth policies are working as Oklahoma enjoyed one of the largest increases in employment in the nation in June.

The state’s jobless rate last month dropped to 4.5 percent – the lowest it’s been in nearly six years. Oklahoma’s seasonally adjusted unemployment rate improved a whole percentage point since June 2013.

“Creating jobs has been my number one priority,” said Fallin. “By embracing pro-growth policies like tax cuts, reining in the size of government, and reducing the regulatory burden on job creators, Oklahoma’s economy has gotten back on the right track.”

Oklahoma added 9,600 employed persons last month, according to seasonally adjusted data by the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics and the Oklahoma Employment Security Commission. June’s rate was down from 4.6 percent in May and April.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the appointments of David Thompson, Phil Kennedy and Steve Mason to the State Capitol Repair Expenditure Oversight Committee. Confirmation from the Oklahoma Senate is not required.

Fallin’s appointees will join state Reps. Mark McBride, R-Moore, Earl Sears, R-Bartlesville, and R.C. Pruett, D-Antlers, who were appointed earlier by House Speaker Jeff Hickman.

The appointees are part of a nine-member bi-partisan committee, which will oversee the repairs to the Capitol. The remaining appointees will be from the Senate president pro tempore.

Governor Mary Fallin to Feds: Keep Your Word and Close Illegal Immigrant Facility After 120 Days

07/18/2014 12:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today called on the Obama Administration to keep its promise to the people of Oklahoma and close the facility housing illegal immigrant minors at Fort Sill after its 120 day lease.

The facility began housing illegal immigrant minors on June 13. At that time, representatives from the Government Services Administration explained the facility was “temporary” and that the federal government had a 120 day lease expiring on October 10.

“From the very beginning, I have opposed the housing of illegal immigrants at Fort Sill,” said Fallin. “As I have told the administration, this facility is a testament to their failure to secure the borders and enforce our laws. It is a burden to taxpayers, who are being asked to shoulder transportation, medical and education expenses. It is also a potential health hazard.

Governor Mary Fallin Issues Statement on Same-Sex Marriage Ruling

07/18/2014 11:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement in response to a ruling from 10th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals striking down Oklahoma's constitutional amendment defining marriage as between one man and one woman.

"In 2004, voters had an opportunity to decide whether or not to allow same-sex marriage in Oklahoma. Seventy-six percent voted not to, and to instead define marriage as the union between one man and one woman. I was one of the many voters who cast my ballot in favor of traditional marriage.

"Today's ruling is another instance of federal courts ignoring the will of the people and trampling on the right of states to govern themselves. In this case, two judges have acted to overturn a law supported by Oklahomans. Their decision will be appealed and, I hope, overturned. Bureaucracies aren't people. That's evidenced by two federal agencies' wrongheaded decision to cut off a grant program awarding surplus military vehicles to rural fire departments.

Thanks to some tough words by U.S. Sen. Jim Inhofe and Gov. Mary Fallin, the Defense Logistics Agency, an arm of the U.S. Department of Defense, and the Environmental Protection Agency struck a pact restoring the program.

Inhofe is a senior member of the Senate committees that oversee the EPA and the DOD, and he enlisted other lawmakers to keep the surplus program alive.

Tulsa World: Gov. Fallin slams Obama on immigration, says kids will be financial burden to states

By RANDY KREHBIEL World Staff Writer

Gov. Mary Fallin harshly criticized the Obama administration's immigration policies on Wednesday and said she fears the recent influx of unaccompanied minors from Latin America will become a financial burden to the states.

"Many of our public schools are already at capacity and need additional funding," Fallin said. "Our health-care system is strained as it is. Now, instead of allowing us to address those needs for Oklahomans, President Obama is forcing us to add an unspecified number of illegal immigrants to our public education and public health systems.

"The president is ignoring the very real needs of Oklahomans - and Americans everywhere - so that he can continue a policy of amnesty for families that want to send their children to the United States. Ultimately, it's American taxpayers who are picking up the tab."

Tulsa World Editorial: Workers comp reform difficult and needed

By World's Editorial Writers

Change isn't always easy.

The state's determination to reform its workers compensation system from a litigious, inefficient and expensive judicial system to a cost-saving administrative system is a perfect example of how needed transformation can still be difficult.

Workers compensation is complex to begin with, but the process has been made more difficult by vested interests determined to win their point in court after losing it in the Legislature.

First, there was a challenge to the 2013 law's constitutionality, based on the argument that it violated the Constitution's one-topic mandate. The high court disagreed. The law went into effect.

Then, there were complaints that the state was shorting the budget for operating the old court system during the transition and that injured workers would have to wait longer for their cases to resolve. The

Gov. Fallin Statement on Passing of Historian, State Pardon and Parole Board Member Currie Ballard

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today said she was saddened to hear of the death of Currie Ballard, an expert on black history in Oklahoma and an appointee of hers on a state board.

“My thoughts and prayers are with his family and friends during this difficult time.”

Fallin in 2011 appointed Ballard to a four-year term on the Oklahoma Pardon and Parole Board. He earlier served on the board from 1999 to 2003.

Beginning July 1, the Oklahoma Workers' Compensation Commission and the Oklahoma Workers' Compensation Court of Existing Claims began operating as separate, stand-alone agencies. New workers' comp claims will be processed only by the commission, as the old court model is gradually phased out.

OKLAHOMA CITY – In a letter to the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), Governor Mary Fallin today criticized the agency for discontinuing a longstanding program allowing Oklahoma's rural fire departments to repurpose surplus military equipment into fire engines and water tenders.

Oklahoma's rural fire departments are using nearly 9,000 military surplus vehicles and pieces of equipment, valued at more than $150 million, acquired through the Federal Excess Personal Property (FEPP) and the Firefighter Property Program (FPP).

The EPA and the Pentagon recently discontinued the practice of providing surplus military equipment to rural fire departments, citing the carbon emissions of the vehicles. Fallin said the decision to gut the program for environmental reasons jeopardizes the effectiveness of Oklahoma's firefighting efforts. In her letter, she asked

Education beyond High School is the "New Minimum" for Success in Today's Economy

Here's a fact: today's economy is more competitive and more complicated than it was fifty years ago. Oklahomans entering the workforce today are not just competing against Texans; they are competing against Americans in all 50 states, and workers in Mexico, India, Europe and China.

Today's jobs require more skills. Fifty years ago you could stand on an assembly line, turn a crank, and expect to be able to provide a middle class life for your family. Those days are over. Today's manufacturing and energy jobs require everything from basic internet and computer skills to knowledge of advanced robotics.

A more global and more specialized economy has created a more competitive job market with less room for unskilled labor. In fact, it has all but eliminated the possibility that a traditional high school diploma can lead to a job that pays a

“This holiday, let's not forget to keep in our thoughts and prayers those who have served and currently serve in our nation's military. Their courage, sacrifice and service ensure our rights and liberties are passed along to future generations of Americans.

“I am wishing all Oklahomans a happy and safe Independence Day, while encouraging all of us to bear in mind the sacrifices made by those in the U.S. Armed Forces that have made this celebration possible.”

Gov. Fallin Announces Extension of Insure Oklahoma

06/30/2014 03:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the state of Oklahoma has been granted a one-year extension for the Insure Oklahoma program.

The program, scheduled to expire at the end of 2014, has been extended through Dec. 31, 2015.

“This is great news for the thousands of adults and children who currently buy health insurance through Insure Oklahoma,” said Fallin. “These Oklahomans and their families can now be assured that they won’t lose their insurance on January 1.”

Insure Oklahoma provides health insurance for almost 19,000 working, low-income Oklahomans. It is funded by the state’s tobacco tax matched with federal dollars. This is the second extension for Insure Oklahoma in less than a year granted by the federal government, which originally considered having the program expire at the beginning of 2014.

Insure Oklahoma also serves approximately 4,280 small businesses, which “Religious liberty is one of the principles this nation was founded upon. It is a freedom woven into the fabric of this country and expressly outlined in our Bill of Rights. Gov. Fallin: Fort Sill Facility Housing Illegal Immigrants a Result of Pres. Obama’s Failed Po

06/20/2014 04:45 PM CDT

LAWTON – Governor Mary Fallin today toured a temporary shelter at Fort Sill housing almost 600 unaccompanied minors who crossed the United States’ southern border illegally. The tour was lead by officials with the U.S. Health and Human Services Administration for Children and Families. Federal officials barred access to the tour for the media and requested no pictures or video be taken.

Following the tour, Fallin criticized President Obama for lax immigration policies that have lead to an illegal immigration crisis.

“This facility at Fort Sill is a testament to President Obama’s failed immigration policies and his lack of seriousness when it comes to border security,” Fallin said. “Over 50,000 unaccompanied minors illegally made their way into the U.S. in the last year. Because of the president’s insistence on amnesty over border security, that number is expected to double. The president’s failed policies are

Governor Mary Fallin Statement Supporting OHLAP College Scholarships

06/13/2014 02:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued a statement in support of the Oklahoma Higher Access Learning Program (OHLAP), which provides college scholarships to low and middle income students. Fallin responded to confusion about OHLAP and the FY 2015 budget agreement, which reduces money sent to an OHLAP revolving fund by $7.8 million to allow that money to be used elsewhere in the state budget.

“In order to balance the state’s budget and adequately fund core government services like public education, the Legislature and I agreed to a budget deal that sends $7.8 million that would otherwise go to OHLAP to other parts of the budget. Historically, monies available for OHLAP scholarships have carried an excess year-end cash balance of over $18 million after all scholarship obligations have been funded. The $7.8 million reduction should have no effect whatsoever on the number of college students receiving scholarships or the state’s ability

Gov. Fallin Issues Statement on Use of Fort Sill as Detention Facility for Illegal Minors

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement after her office was informed by the Regional Administrator of the U.S. Department of Homeland Security that Fort Sill is being considered as a location for the housing of up to 1,200 unaccompanied minors who illegally crossed the southern border of the United States.

"The Obama administration today informed the state of Oklahoma that Fort Sill will be housing up to 1,200 unaccompanied minors who came into this country illegally. While they have assured my office this arrangement is temporary, the Obama administration continues to fail in its duty to protect our borders and continues to promote policies that encourage, rather than discourage, illegal immigration. Gov. Fallin Signs HB 3399 to Repeal and Replace Common Core Standards

New Standards will be developed in Oklahoma and Increase Academic Rigor

OKLAHOMA CITY—Governor Mary Fallin today signed HB 3399, a bill that replaces the Common Core State Standards (CCSS) in English and math with academic standards to be designed by the state of Oklahoma.

HB 3399 repeals the adoption of CCSS and directs the State Board of Education to create new, more rigorous standards by August 2016. For the first time in state history, the State Regents for Higher Education, the State Board of Career and Technology Education, and the Oklahoma Department of Commerce will be asked to formally evaluate those standards to determine they are “college and career ready.” While those new standards are being written, the state standards for English and math will revert to the Oklahoma Priority Academic Student Skills (PASS) standards used from 2003 to 2010.

The 2014 Legislative Session: Creating More Opportunities for Oklahoma Families and Businesses

By Governor Mary Fallin

At the beginning of the 2014 Legislative Session, I asked our lawmakers to work with me to build on the considerable momentum we have helped to create in Oklahoma. That momentum includes:

- Over 90,000 new jobs created since 2011 and a reduction of the unemployment rate from over 7 percent in 2010 to just 4.6 percent today
- Per capita income growth of 6.3 percent from 2011 to 2013, the second-highest growth rate in the nation during that time period and
- The restoration of the Rainy Day fund, which went from broke ($2.03 in 2011, to be exact) to a high over $570 million

We have achieved these results through hard work and a commitment to fiscally conservative, pro-growth policies as well as the elimination of government waste. When Washington tried to push

Gov. Fallin Signs Major Pension Reform Bill

05/30/2014 11:15 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed a bill that creates a more flexible pension system for future state workers.

House Bill 2630 moves future state employees from a defined benefit plan to the 401k-style, defined contribution plan being widely used in the private sector. The law does not cover employees designated “hazardous duty” – including firefighters and law enforcement officers—or teachers. It does not change the pension system for current employees or retirees.

“This bill allows flexibility for future state employees to take the money they have accrued if they change careers,” said Fallin. “That helps us to make state employment more attractive and aids in recruitment.”

The bill also starts to address the unfunded liability within the debt-burdened system that currently exists.

“Oklahoma pension systems currently have $11 billion in

State Burn Ban Will Expire Wednesday, June 4

Governor Mary Fallin Urges County Commissioners to Issue Local Burn Bans if Appropriate

OKLAHOMA CITY -- The burn ban issued by Governor Mary Fallin on May 5 covering 36 counties is set to expire this coming Wednesday, June 4. Due to the significant rain fall received in some areas of the state over the last week, the governor does not expect to renew that burn ban for any county. However, many areas of the state remain in conditions of extreme drought (see more here). County Commissioners in all 77 counties have the authority to declare countywide burn bans should conditions warrant.

"Thankfully, many parts of Oklahoma have received rain over the last several days," Fallin said. "That helps to mitigate the danger of wildfires and is certainly good news for our farmers and ranchers as well as our lakeside communities.

"We must, however, remain vigilant

Gov. Fallin Signs Measure to Repair Crumbling State Capitol

05/29/2014 02:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin signed into law today a measure that will provide funding to pay for repairing the crumbling state Capitol.

House Joint Resolution 1033 authorizes a $120 million bond issue to pay for repairs to the nearly 100-year-old building and replace outdated electrical and plumbing systems.

“It’s great that this important symbol of Oklahoma is finally getting the treatment it deserves,” said Fallin. “This bond issue represents a responsible approach to repair the building.

“This is the people’s house, a symbol of our state, and the seat of our government. All Oklahomans have a vested interest in maintaining this building and ensuring it does not continue to fall into disrepair. My thanks go out to our legislators for taking action to restore the Capitol.”

HJR 1033 also requires the formation of the State Capitol Repair Expenditure Oversight Committee,

Gov. Fallin Signs Bill Modifying Gross Production Tax Incentive

05/28/2014 01:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law a permanent, lowered tax rate that will continue a drilling incentive program for oil and natural gas companies operating in Oklahoma.

House Bill 2562 provides an incentive on oil and natural gas production from all new wells drilled after July 1, 2015. Under that incentive, all production from all new wells will be taxed at 2 percent for 36 months. After the first 36 months, a gross production tax rate of 7 percent applies. The initially lower rate is designed to encourage increased drilling and energy production in Oklahoma.

The Oklahoma Department of Commerce estimates that 25% of all Oklahoma jobs are supported directly or indirectly by the energy industry.

“The energy industry is the leading driver of economic growth and job creation in Oklahoma,” said Fallin. “Approximately one in four Oklahomans have a job and a salary because of

05/27/2014 02:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the appointment of Thomas 'Pete' Churchwell, of Grove, to the Grand River Dam Authority (GRDA) board of directors. He is succeeding Betty Kerns, who resigned.

Churchwell will serve the remainder of Kern’s unexpired term ending in August 2015 and will represent economic development interests, lake enthusiasts and property owners.

He is retired from Public Service Co. of Oklahoma (PSO), a unit of American Electric Power, where he served as president and chief operations officer.

“Pete Churchwell has spent his entire career in energy management in both the public and private sector,” Fallin said. “He brings a unique leadership skill-set to the GRDA and will serve this agency well.”

Throughout his career, Churchwell served in a variety of roles including: executive vice president for West Texas Utilities in Abilene, Texas (1993-96);

“As we celebrate this Memorial Day weekend, I encourage Oklahomans to take a moment to remember and honor those who have fought and died to defend the freedom we continue to enjoy every day.

“I'm wishing Oklahomans a safe and fun Memorial Day weekend. I know they will join me in keeping our former and current military personnel in their thoughts and prayers.”

Gov. Fallin Thanks House of Representatives for Reconsidering School Safety Measure

05/22/2014 08:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the passage of House Joint Resolution 1092 in the Oklahoma House of Representatives. The bill had been defeated earlier in the day, but was reconsidered and passed on Thursday night.

“Because of the extraordinary efforts of Rep. Mark McBride and Rep. Jon Echols, who represent communities in Moore and Oklahoma City that were hard-hit by last year’s storms, HJR 1092 has been revived and is now heading to the Senate for final passage. These legislators have my thanks and appreciation for their work on this bill and their dedication to making Oklahoma schools safer for children and teachers.

“It is now up to the Senate to act on this bill and ensure the people of Oklahoma have a chance to vote on a plan to help put more storm shelters and safe rooms in our schools.”

Gov. Fallin Statement Regarding the Legislature's Failure to Pass School Safety Legislation

05/22/2014 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement after House Joint Resolution 1092 failed to pass in the Oklahoma House of Representatives:

"A little more than a year ago today, seven children had their lives cut short when Plaza Towers Elementary School was ripped apart by a tornado in Moore. Those children would have been alive today if that school had a safe room.

"House Joint Resolution 1092 would have helped Oklahoma communities build storm shelters and saferooms in their schools. It would have saved lives.

"It failed today because of a politically motivated and intentionally misleading smear campaign. Critics of the bill said HJR 1092 would have raised taxes. It does not. It would have allowed local communities to increase their bonding indebtedness only if those communities voted to do so. It is a local control measure that supports decisions made by local

Gov. Fallin Comments on Veto Override of Bill that Rolls Back Literacy Standards

05/21/2014 05:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the veto override of House Bill 2625:

"I am disappointed today that the Legislature chose to override my veto of HB 2625, a bill which undercuts third-grade literacy standards and returns us to a system that has failed Oklahoma children for decades.

"At issue is this: what is the best way to help the nearly 8,000 third-graders we know are reading at a first-grade level? By overriding my veto, the Legislature has ensured the vast amount of these third-graders will go on to the fourth grade. They have not, however, acted to provide them with the tools they need to succeed. These children will now be asked to do more difficult coursework, and to do so with very limited reading skills.

"My concern continues to be that we are setting these children up for failure. We are asking them to succeed when we have not given

Third grade reading requirement is crucial part of improving Oklahoma's education system

Oklahoma City (May 20, 2014) – The State Chamber of Oklahoma commends Governor Mary Fallin for taking a tough stance on keeping education reforms passed by a previous Republican legislature. Her action reaffirms the importance of making sure students can read at grade level in order to be promoted from third grade to fourth grade.

“Learning to read is the most important determination of a child’s future education,” said State Chamber President & CEO Fred Morgan. “If we want students to become proficient in

Gov. Fallin Thanks Legislators for Support of Pension Reform Bill

05/20/2014 05:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today thanked members of the Oklahoma House of Representatives for passing House Bill 2630, a pension reform bill. The bill moves future state employees from a defined benefit plan to the 401k style, defined contribution plans being widely used in the private sector. The law does not cover employees designated “hazardous duty” – including firefighters and law enforcement officers—or teachers. It does not change the pension system for current employees or retirees.

HB 2630 passed in the House by a vote of 58-33. It now heads to the Oklahoma State Senate.

“Moving to a 401K-style pension model for future hires will make Oklahoma better able to recruit and hire qualified employees for state government by giving them more portable and flexible retirement benefits.

“This bill also helps protect current employees and retirees by making our pension system, which

Gov. Fallin Vetoes Bill Rolling Back Literacy Standards

05/20/2014 04:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today vetoed House Bill 2625, a bill that rolls back the literacy standards established in the Reading Sufficiency Act (RSA). The RSA was first passed in 2011 with the goal of ensuring that every third grade child can read before being promoted to fourth grade.

“The research is clear,” said Fallin. “From kindergarten to third grade, children learn to read. Beginning in the fourth grade, they ‘read to learn.’ Without basic literacy skills, children in the fourth grade fall further and further behind. Those children are more likely to drop out of high school and less likely to find good jobs even if they do graduate. Promoting them to fourth grade without the basic tools they need to succeed is not just unwise; it is immoral. We must ensure our children have basic proficiency in reading before the fourth grade.”

Gov. Fallin Issues Statement on Anniversary of May Tornadoes

05/20/2014 12:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the one year anniversary of last year's May tornadoes:

"One year ago today, a devastating tornado took the life of 25 Oklahomans. Unfortunately, that tornado was neither the first nor the last during what was an extremely difficult and tragic month for the people of Oklahoma. We lost 49 lives and 1300 homes to storms during one of the worst stretches of severe weather in the history of our state.

"Today, please join me in remembering and praying for those who lost loved ones as well as those who suffered injuries or lost homes.

"On the one year anniversary of the Moore tornado, I would also like to offer my appreciation to all those who helped in the rescue, recovery and rebuilding of Moore and other communities hit by last year's storms. In the wake of the tornadoes, we witnessed incredible courage, resiliency and generosity. We are

Governor Fallin, House and Senate Leaders Reach Budget Deal

05/16/2014 11:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY — Governor Mary Fallin, Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman and House Speaker Jeff Hickman today announced an appropriated state budget agreement for Fiscal Year 2015.

The agreement increases funding for K-12 education by $80 million and uses targeted spending cuts and a reconciliation of several state agency accounts to close a $188 million shortfall in funds certified for appropriations. It avoids cuts to priority areas like public safety, higher education and mental health while making necessary spending reductions in other areas of state government.

The $80 million increase to common education funding for FY 15 adds to the $74 million in additional K-12 funding added in FY 14, bringing a total of new common education funding to $154 million in the past two fiscal years.

“We have gone to extraordinary lengths – even with a sluggish revenue year – to add substantial new resources to common education in

The SBA disaster loans are available for renters, homeowners, business owners and private, non-profits to repair or replace any real estate or personal property damaged by the storm which was not covered by insurance. The loan program is also available to assist businesses that sustained economic injury due to the storm.

A Disaster Loan Outreach Center is now open at the Robert Whitebird Cultural Center at 905 Whitebird Street in Quapaw. SBA officials will be on-hand to assist individuals in completing applications, explain the process and answer questions. The Outreach Center

Gov. Fallin Responds to Legislative Override

05/08/2014 11:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement after the state Senate approved final legislative action to override her veto of House Bill 2461:

"Last Tuesday I vetoed 15 bills in an attempt to refocus the attention of the Legislature on important issues facing this state that have been left unaddressed. Those issues include: the need to support local communities seeking to build storm shelters in schools; the need to repair our crumbling state Capitol; addressing our unfunded and fiscally unstable pension system; working to reduce the crisis of prescription drug abuse in Oklahoma; and delivering a responsible, balanced budget that funds core areas of government such as education appropriately while delivering targeted pay raises to some state employees.

Gov. Fallin Declares Statewide Emergency, Issues Burn Ban for 36 Counties

05/05/2014 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today declared a state of emergency for all 77 counties because of wildfires that began Sunday, May 4. The governor also issued an executive proclamation that declares a burn ban for 36 counties.

One person was killed and numerous homes and structures have been destroyed in Logan County since a wildfire began late Sunday afternoon. Additional fires were reported near Altus, Jennings and Keystone Lake in Pawnee County, Seiling, Stillwater and Woodward. Damage assessments are ongoing.

“My thanks go out to the firefighters and first responders who have been battling wildfires in several areas of the state,” said Fallin. “The emergency declaration allows state agencies to acquire resources that can aid in that firefighting effort.”

(Warning: this column contains descriptions of a violent crime and is unsuitable for children)

Last week, the state of Oklahoma conducted the lawful execution of Clayton Lockett, a man who was convicted of first degree burglary, assault with a dangerous weapon, kidnapping, robbery by force and fear, forcible oral sodomy, rape and first degree murder.

A timeline released by the Department of Corrections shows what witnesses to the execution knew immediately: the process of death by lethal injection took too long.

To avoid a repeat of last week’s prolonged execution, I have asked Department of Public Safety Commissioner Michael Thompson to conduct a thorough review of the events leading up to Lockett’s death. I have also asked the commissioner to develop a set of updated and improved execution protocols, and Department of Corrections

Gov. Fallin Announces Severe Weather Initiatives for Oklahoma

05/01/2014 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Speaking at a news conference today, Governor Mary Fallin announced several severe weather initiatives the state has been undertaking since last May’s devastating tornado outbreak. The preparedness initiative is designed to keep Oklahomans safe during severe weather season.

The announcement came with the introduction of a set of new public service announcements (PSAs) featuring Governor Fallin, developed to help remind Oklahomans to be prepared for severe weather. The PSAs urge Oklahomans to take steps now in advance of storms. There are four PSAs for television broadcast and one for radio, which is also offered in Spanish.

Progress on three new programs was also highlighted as part of the news conference, including the formalization of a public/private partnership program. The state has long worked with the private sector during and after disasters, however this program will help to streamline communications between government and

Gov. Fallin Orders Independent Review of Execution Protocols

04/30/2014 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding last night’s execution of Clayton Lockett, the upcoming execution of Charles Warner, and the implementation of an independent review of the Oklahoma Department of Corrections’ execution protocols. The governor also signed an executive order (see attached) authorizing the review, which will be led by Department of Public Safety Commissioner Michael Thompson.

“Last night, the state executed Clayton Lockett. In 1999, Clayton Lockett physically assaulted, kidnapped, and shot Stephanie Neiman, and then had an accomplice bury her alive in a shallow grave. He also repeatedly raped a second woman.

“He was convicted in a fair trial by a jury of his peers. He was then sentenced to death.

He appealed his execution, and that appeal was rejected by both the Oklahoma Supreme Court and the Oklahoma Court of Criminal appeals. He had

Gov. Fallin Issues Stay of Execution, Orders Evaluation of Lethal Dosage Protocol

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin this evening issued a stay of execution for one inmate after prison officials said another inmate’s veins collapsed during an earlier execution procedure.

“I have asked the Department of Corrections to conduct a full review of Oklahoma’s execution procedures to determine what happened and why during this evening’s execution of Clayton Derrell Lockett,” said Fallin. “I have issued an executive order delaying the execution of Charles Frederick Warner for 14 days to allow for that review to be completed.”

Lockett’s execution was halted when it appeared the lethal injection administered to him was ineffective. He remained unconscious and passed away in the execution chamber at 7:06 p.m.

Execution officials said Lockett remained unconscious after the lethal injection drugs were administered.

Gov. Fallin Signs Tax Cut into Law

04/28/2014 04:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed an income tax cut measure into law. Senate Bill 1246 will gradually lower Oklahoma’s top income tax rate from 5.25 percent to 4.85 percent over several years. The cuts are dependent on revenue triggers, meaning general revenue in Oklahoma must see an increase before the cuts take effect.

“This is a responsible, measured tax cut that will make Oklahoma more economically competitive while providing much needed tax relief to working families,” said Fallin. “If Oklahoma wants to attract and retain good jobs – rather than losing them to neighboring states – we must improve our tax climate. I am proud that the Legislature has taken action to do so and I am happy to sign this bill into law.

“This tax cut will put more than $200 million annually into the economy and make Oklahoma a better place to do business, meaning more opportunities and jobs for

Gov. Fallin Declares State of Emergency in Ottawa County Due to Tornado

04/28/2014 10:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today declared a state of emergency for Ottawa County due to a tornado that struck Quapaw on Sunday.

One person was killed in Quapaw and the city’s fire station was destroyed when a tornado struck early Sunday evening. The tornado struck an area from First to Sixth streets, destroying at least five businesses and other structures. Damage assessments are ongoing today.

“Our hearts and prayers are with those who have been affected by Sunday’s tornado,” Fallin said. “The state is prepared to offer every resource available to assist with cleanup, rebuilding and recovery.”

Under the Executive Order, state agencies can make emergency purchases and acquisitions needed to expedite the delivery of resources to local jurisdictions. The declaration also marks a first step toward seeking federal assistance should it be necessary.

Gov. Fallin Says Oklahoma Preparing for Executions after State Supreme Court Ruling

04/24/2014 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – As a result of the Oklahoma Supreme Court dissolving its stay of execution for two inmates, Governor Mary Fallin said today the state is proceeding with plans to execute both men by lethal injection on Tuesday, April 29.

The Supreme Court ruled last night that the rights of inmates Clayton Derrell Lockett and Charles Frederick Warner were not being violated. The court's ruling means that the executions of the two convicted murderers can proceed.

"This ruling shows that our legal system works," said Fallin. "The defendants had their day in court. The court has made a decision. Two men that do not contest their guilt in heinous murders will now face justice, and the families and friends of their victims will now have closure."

The state Department of Corrections is working on specifics and logistics of how both executions will be carried out Tuesday.

Both inmates challenged their

Gov. Fallin Issues Order Postponing Execution

04/22/2014 05:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued a stay in this evening's scheduled execution of Clayton Derrell Lockett.

Fallin issued the stay in an executive order to clear up possible confusion arising from an earlier stay issued by the Oklahoma Supreme Court. The Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals, which typically has jurisdiction in execution matters, previously denied the stay.

"While I have great respect for the honorable men and women of the Supreme Court, this attempted stay of execution is outside the constitutional authority of that body," said Fallin.

The governor's stay is for seven days, which sets Lockett's execution for April 29.

Fallin is asking the Oklahoma attorney general's office during the next seven days to file appropriate papers with the Oklahoma Court of Criminal Appeals as to how that court would direct her to implement the execution.

SBA Denies Governor's Assistance Request for Businesses Affected by Bridge Closure

04/17/2014 09:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today "expressed disappointment" with the notification from the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) that her request was denied for an economic injury declaration for businesses that continue to be impacted by the closure of the James C. Nance Memorial Bridge between Purcell and Lexington.

The governor requested the declaration for Cleveland and McClain counties on April 7. Approval would have allowed business owners in McClain and Cleveland counties to apply for federally subsidized loans.

The SBA denial letter states that the Jan. 31, 2014 bridge closure does not meet the definition of a disaster declaration, which is identified in the Small Business Act as “a sudden event which causes severe damage.”

SBA does not offer an appeal process for the economic injury disaster loan program.

Gov. Mary Fallin: President Obama’s Minimum Wage Hike Ignores Economic Reality

04/16/2014 06:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding her opposition to President Obama’s plan to increase the national minimum wage from $7.25/hour to $10.10/hour. Fallin released the statement after signing Senate Bill 1023, a bill that ensures municipalities in Oklahoma cannot mandate a minimum wage higher than the national rate.

“President Obama and the Democratic Party are advocating for an increase in the minimum wage from $7.25 to $10.10. They believe that on this issue, like on so many others, the government can just mandate prosperity and growth with no consideration of economic reality. Now they are taking that fight to Oklahoma, urging their liberal allies to push for mandatory wage increases.

“President Obama and his Oklahoma surrogates say they want to raise the minimum wage to reduce poverty. They are ignoring the fact that most minimum wage workers are young, single people working part

Bills that now await to be taken up by the full House include measures that would provide funding for state Capitol repairs; increase accountability at state charter schools; reduce Oklahoma’s personal income tax rate; provide a pay increase for state troopers; and appropriate funds to complete the American Indian Cultural Center and Museum in Oklahoma City.

“These measures are certainly worthy of further consideration this session,” Fallin said. “I appreciate members of the House Appropriations and Budget Committee working long hours to discuss and act on these bills.”

Key measures that the panel passed include:

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Extension of Aerospace Engineers Tax Credit

04/09/2014 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law a bill extending tax incentives to employers and employees in the aerospace industry. HB 2509 will extend the sunset date on the aerospace engineer employee and employer tax credit and the employer credit for tuition reimbursement until January 1, 2018. It also clarifies the definition of “qualified employee” to address an issue with previous aerospace interns being unable to access the credit once they have received their engineering degree.

“The aerospace engineer tax credit has helped to create hundreds of new, high paying jobs for skilled Oklahomans,” said Fallin. “It’s also played a key role in maintaining Oklahoma’s position as an internationally recognized hub for aerospace business.”

Over 500 aerospace-related companies are located in Oklahoma, providing 144,000 direct and indirect jobs with an average salary of $56,000. Oklahoma’s

Gov. Fallin Seeks Financial Aid for Businesses Affected by Bridge Closure

04/09/2014 09:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin is seeking federal assistance for businesses in Lexington and Purcell that have been adversely affected by the closing of a state of Oklahoma bridge that connects the two communities.

Repairs are underway to the James C. Nance Memorial Bridge, which has been closed since Jan. 31. The bridge, which provided a 10-minute trip between Lexington and Purcell, was closed after cracks were found in the beams of the truss system that holds the 76-year-old bridge over the Canadian River.

The bridge’s closure has resulted in a 45-minute one-way trip between Lexington and Purcell to conduct businesses from one community to the other. June 14 is the target date to reopen the bridge.

Fallin is requesting that the U.S. Small Business Administration (SBA) declare an economic injury declaration that would allow business owners in McClain and Cleveland counties to apply for federally subsidized

Spring Safety: Getting Ready for Tornado Season

04/07/2014 11:00 AM CDT

By Governor Mary Fallin

Spring is here, and we can all be thankful for the opportunity to spend more time outdoors and enjoy the beautiful Oklahoma weather. Unfortunately, the changing weather patterns also mean something else: the beginning of tornado season.

Last year's horrible May storms were an unwelcome reminder that Oklahoma's weather can be deadly. They were also a reminder that, as a state, we need to do more to protect ourselves, especially our children, from the danger of tornadoes.

Oklahoma currently has over 1800 schools, about a third of which have safe rooms or tornado shelters. In a state where tornadoes are a common occurrence, that just isn't enough. We need to do more to give our communities the tools they need to make our schools safer for our students and teachers.

Traditionally, all school construction has been proposed, constructed and funded at the local level. That allows Jon Parsley has been appointed district judge for Texas County. He succeeds Greg Zigler who retired. Parsley will begin service immediately.

Parsley, of Guymon, has been in private practice since 2003, focusing on oil and gas, real estate and contracts. He also handles civil and criminal cases.

“Jon Parsley is an accomplished attorney who brings with him many years of experience in both civil and criminal defense,” Fallin said. “He will serve the citizens of Texas County well.”

Parsley currently serves on the Oklahoma Bar Association’s (OBA) Professional Responsibilities Commission and as chairman of

Gov. Fallin Thanks Senate Rules Committee for Bipartisan Support of School Shelter/Safety Measure

04/02/2014 01:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today thanked the Oklahoma Senate Committee on Rules for its bipartisan support of a constitutional amendment that would allow Oklahoma school districts to pursue a one-time increase in bonding capacity to fund upgrades such as storm shelters, safe rooms and precautions against intruders. The bill passed 12-3 in the Senate Committee on Rules, with the support of both Republican and Democratic senators.

The measure now goes to the full Senate. The Oklahoma House of Representatives previously voted 65-28 to pass House Joint Resolution 1092.

“My thanks go out to the senators who supported this plan today and worked to advance it,” said Fallin. “I especially appreciate Senator Anthony Sykes for championing this issue in his legislative body.

“This resolution empowers communities to take action to better protect their children from tornadoes and other threats. It is a fiscally

Iowa Governor's Office: Gov. Fallin and Iowa's governor visit bombing memorial donated by Iowans

03/28/2014 05:00 PM CDT

(OKLAHOMA CITY, Oklahoma) – Iowa Gov. Terry E. Branstad yesterday joined Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin in visiting a grove of trees the people of Iowa donated to the victims of the April 19,1995, bombing of the Alfred P. Murrah Building in Oklahoma City. This is the first time that Branstad has returned to view the bombing memorial tree garden since he took part in a dedication ceremony in November 1995.

“After the bombing in Oklahoma City in 1995, the governor’s office worked with Iowa citizens to pay tribute to the victims of this horrific act in Oklahoma,” said Branstad. “We remembered that two years prior to the bombing, Oklahomans graciously donated food and water to Iowans affected by the 1993 floods. I was honored to be able to pay my respects to the victims of the bombing and visit the grove that Iowans so generously donated during a difficult time for Oklahomans.”

OKLAHOMA CITY, OK—National Governors Association (NGA) Chair Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin brought together state teams to discuss her yearlong effort, America Works: Education and Training for Tomorrow’s Jobs. She was joined by Iowa Gov. Terry Branstad and Missouri Gov. Jay Nixon. The initiative focuses on improving state education and workforce training systems and aligning those systems with the needs of individual state economies.

“Preparing America’s 21st century workforce to keep pace and stay competitive is an issue that not only calls for national attention, it also demands gubernatorial leadership,” Gov. Fallin said. “Developing a highly educated workforce and closing the skills gap in our states is essential to ensuring our children’s futures and strengthening our economies.”

Governor Mary Fallin Comments on Lesser Prairie Chicken Being Listed as a Threatened Species

03/27/2014 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today commented on the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service’s decision to list the Lesser Prairie Chicken as a Threatened Species under the Endangered Species Act (ESA). The governor expressed optimism at the unprecedented option included in the decision that allows landowners and industry to receive protections from harming the species by enrolling in the Western Association of Fish and Wildlife Agencies’ Range Wide Plan and taking steps to allow for conservation:

“While I had asked the Fish and Wildlife Service to not list the Lesser Prairie Chicken under the ESA, due in large part to Oklahoma’s efforts to develop and implement the Range Wide Plan, I believe we have a unique opportunity to show how a plan based in state management of this species can allow for a quick recovery,” said Fallin. “I appreciate the outstanding work of the Oklahoma Department of Wildlife Conservation to develop a new

Governor Mary Fallin Statement on Planned Education Rally

03/27/2014 10:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the upcoming March 31 education rally to be held at the Oklahoma State Capitol.

"I support more funding for common education and I appreciate teachers, parents and students being engaged on this issue. Last year I signed into law a budget that delivered over $120 million in new education money, by far the biggest increase in resources to any area of government.

"This year I proposed another increase of $50 million in K-12 education funding increases, despite a $190 million budget shortfall that will lead to spending cuts at most agencies.

"Providing adequate funding is vital to increasing educational attainment and student performance in Oklahoma. Equally important are the careful implementation and funding of education reforms focusing on accountability in schools, child literacy, and the creation of more rigorous standards in the

Governor Mary Fallin Statement on Common Core Legislation

03/24/2014 11:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement on House Bill 3399, which passed out of the Senate Education Committee this morning. The measure would replace the Common Core English and Math standards with new, rigorous standards designed by the Oklahoma State Board of Education. It also protects against federal interference or control by prohibiting the state Board of Education from entering into any contract or agreement with any federal agency or private entity that would cede or limit state control.

"Raising education standards and increasing classroom rigor are essential to ensuring our children are prepared for college or to begin their careers when they graduate from high school," said Fallin. "As we work to raise the bar in our schools, it is essential that higher academic standards are developed and implemented by and for Oklahomans. We have no interest in relinquishing control over

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today commented on plans by the Oklahoma Senate Education Committee to consider House Bill 3399 on Monday. The measure's intent is to provide for the development and adoption of new English and math standards and assessments while prohibiting the state Board of Education from entering into any contract or agreement with any federal agency or private entity that would cede or limit state control.

“As a state, we must continue to raise education standards and increase accountability in public schools. Nothing is more important to the long term success of our children, nor as essential to our ability to compete in a competitive global economy that demands a highly skilled, highly educated workforce,” said Fallin.

“As we work to increase classroom rigor and raise the academic bar in our schools, I have been clear that Oklahoma must take the lead in developing and implementing our

Gov. Fallin Thanks House for Bipartisan Support of School Shelter/Safety Measure

03/13/2014 11:15 AM CDT

The House voted 65-28 to pass House Joint Resolution 1092. The measure now goes to the Senate.

“My thanks go out to House members who voted for this responsible plan to improve safety and security at Oklahoma schools,” said Fallin, who asked lawmakers to pass the amendment in her State of the State Address earlier this year. “This bill empowers communities to take action to better protect their children from tornadoes and other threats. It is a fiscally responsible, realistic plan that I believe will ultimately help to save lives.

“I especially appreciate the efforts of Representatives Mark McBride

Governor Mary Fallin Praises Oklahoma House of Representatives for Tax Cut Measure

03/06/2014 03:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today praised the Oklahoma House of Representatives for passing a tax cut measure. House Bill 2508 would cut the income tax rate from 5.25 to 5 percent beginning in 2016 provided personal income-tax revenues are equal or greater in fiscal year 2015 than revenues generated in fiscal year 2014.

"The House of Representatives took an important step today towards delivering meaningful, responsible tax relief to Oklahoma families," said Fallin. "Reducing the income tax allows working Oklahomans to keep more of their hard earned money while helping to attract and retain jobs and businesses. It is an important part of our strategy to grow our economy and continue Oklahoma's forward momentum."

HB 2508, which passed the House 57-34, was authored by Representative Earl Sears. It now goes to the Oklahoma Senate.

The Time to Fix the Capitol is Now

By Governor Mary Fallin

The Oklahoma Capitol was built in 1917. Since then it has been the People's House - a place where state business is conducted and laws are written and passed. It is also a living museum where school children and other visitors come to learn about the history of their state and the workings of their government. For many who pass through Oklahoma, it is the lasting impression they have of our home.

I am proud of this building. I am proud of the work that has gone into acquiring and preserving the priceless portraits, paintings and murals that showcase our history. When the dome was completed in 2002, I thought the people of Oklahoma finally had the kind of beautiful, functional Capitol building they deserved.

Unfortunately, the Capitol has been allowed to slowly decompose. Scheduled maintenance and repairs have been put off and unfunded for years.

The results have been predictable: the building that should

Gov. Fallin Comments on Consolidation Bill Advancing

02/27/2014 05:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today commented on the House of Representatives Government Modernization Committee passing House Bill 3028, which calls for the consolidation of the Oklahoma Department of Tourism and Recreation, the Oklahoma Arts Council and the Oklahoma Historical Society into the Oklahoma Department of Tourism, History and Cultural Affairs:

"The Oklahoma Arts Council and the Oklahoma Historical Society make invaluable contributions to tourism, culture and education in Oklahoma. Housing these two agencies as independent entities in the Department of Tourism will enhance, not detract from their missions. Tourism has significant advertising, communications, legal and Internet resources that can be used to support both the Arts Council and the Historical Society. Tourism also can build private and public partnerships to enhance funding. Combining these agencies will save taxpayer dollars while ensuring the resources allocated to

Gov. Fallin Issues Statement on State Panel's Support for Capitol Bond Issue

02/27/2014 03:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued this statement after members of the Long-Range Capital Planning Commission authorized sending to lawmakers a letter supporting a bond issue of up to $160 million to repair the state Capitol:

"These commissioners are successful business and policy leaders whose experience and credibility further affirm that this project is best addressed through a responsible bond issue. The time is right for a bond: interest rates are low and 41 percent of the state's bond indebtedness will come off the books in 2018. It's the responsibility of those of us in state government to maintain and preserve state buildings and assets. A bond issue is the best, most viable way to restore and repair the crumbling state Capitol."

The nine-member Long-Range Capital Planning Commission is charged with addressing repairs to the Capitol and the long-term management of state buildings and properties. The OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued the following statement today on the Oklahoma Senate's passage of Senate Bill 1246, which would lower the state's income tax rate to below 5 percent if the state's economy continues to improve:

"An income tax cut is an important way to stimulate the economy, create jobs and help middle class families. I am open to any and all plans, including the measure passed by the Senate today, that responsibly reduce the income tax rate. I am pleased the Legislature is examining several different tax cut proposals and I encourage them to remain committed to passing a tax reduction measure this year."

SB 1246, which passed the Senate 32-10, was authored by Senate President Pro Tempore Brian Bingman. It now goes to the House of Representatives.

Governor Mary Fallin Thanks Senate Panel for Passing Bill That Cracks Down on Doctor Shopping

02/25/2014 08:45 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Gov. Mary Fallin today thanked members of the Oklahoma Senate Health and Human Services Committee for passing a bill that would require doctors to check the state’s online prescription monitoring program before prescribing a narcotic.

Committee members voted 8-0 Monday to pass Senate Bill 1821. The measure, authored by Sen. A.J. Griffin, now goes to the full Senate.

“Currently, 81 percent of drug-related deaths in Oklahoma are caused by prescription drugs,” said Fallin. “One survey shows that nearly 8 percent of Oklahomans are abusing prescription painkillers. That is twice the national average, and it is unacceptable. The effects of statistics like these are tragic and when left unaddressed we see broken homes, higher incarceration rates, kids left without parents, poverty, child abuse, neglect and suicide.

“My thanks to Senator A.J. Griffin for her hard work on this legislation and her

The Washington Examiner: Gov. Fallin Says Obama's Keystone Decision Coming in a 'Couple of Months'

02/24/2014 01:45 PM CST

Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin said that President Obama informed governors Monday that he would make a final decision on whether to approve the Keystone XL pipeline “in a couple of months.”

Fallin, a Republican, told reporters that she asked the president in a meeting at the White House about his timeline for making a final call on the controversial pipeline that would bring oil from Canada to the Gulf Coast.

The Oklahoma leader said Obama replied that “one way or another, in a couple of months.”

The State Department is now reviewing the project, but a judge last week ruled that a Nebraska law allowing the pipeline to be built in the state was unconstitutional.

Environmentalists are also pressuring the president to block Keystone, but a recent State Department report found that construction of the pipeline would not lead to a significant increase in carbon emissions.

02/20/2014 02:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today praised the Oklahoma Senate for its quick and decisive action in approving Senate Bill 2044, which would authorize a $160 million bond issue to repair the crumbling state Capitol.

The Senate passed the measure 36-11. It now goes to the House of Representatives.

"Many thanks to the senators who voted to support this measure, which would pay for much-needed repairs to the state Capitol," said Fallin. "It's our responsibility to maintain and preserve our seat of government. A bond issue is the best, most realistic option for restoring the People's House."

Governor Fallin proposed a bond for repairs to the state Capitol in her 2014 executive budget and her State of the State Address that she submitted earlier this month to lawmakers.

SB 2044 is authored by Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman and was carried by Sen. Greg Treat.

Gov. Fallin Applauds Oklahoma Senate Passage of Pension Reform Bill

02/19/2014 04:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today applauded the Oklahoma Senate for approving Senate Bill 2120, a pension reform bill. The Senate voted 34-11 to pass the measure. It now goes to the Oklahoma House of Representatives.

SB 2120 moves new state employees from a defined benefit plan to the 401k-style, defined contribution plan being widely used in the private sector. The law does not cover employees designated “hazardous duty” – including firefighters and police officers—or teachers. It does not change the pension system for current employees or retirees.

“Moving new hires to a 401K-style retirement helps us to recruit qualified employees from today’s more mobile workforce,” said Fallin. “The 401k model is a more flexible system that allows employees to take the money they have accrued with them if they change careers.

“Second, and just as important, reforming our pension systems

Gov. Fallin Praises Senate Appropriations Committee for Advancing Capitol Repairs Bond Measure

02/12/2014 11:30 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY - Governor Mary Fallin today thanked the Senate Appropriations Committee for quickly advancing Senate Bill 2044, a bond measure that would provide $160 million to repair the crumbling State Capitol.

“My thanks go out to the lawmakers today who voted to support urgently needed repairs to the State Capitol,” said Fallin. “It is impossible to overstate how desperately the Capitol needs fixing. The facade is crumbling and represents a hazard to employees and visitors. The electrical system is outdated and dangerous, and sewage is literally leaking into our basement. A building that should make Oklahomans proud has become an embarrassment.

“Luckily, the Senate has acted today to pursue a fiscally responsible, commonsense solution. A bond issue would allow us to immediately begin repairs without draining large sums of money from other government priorities, like education and public safety. Furthermore, 41 percent of

The law does not cover employees designated “hazardous duty” – including firefighters and police officers—or teachers. It does not change the pension system for current employees or retirees.

Governor Mary Fallin Declares State of Emergency Due to Lexington/Purcell Bridge Closure

Timeline for Repair Shortened, Monetary Assistance Available for Communities

LEXINGTON—Governor Mary Fallin today declared a State of Emergency in Cleveland and McClain Counties due to the closure of the James C. Nance Memorial Bridge separating the cities of Lexington and Purcell. The bridge was closed last week after numerous cracks were found in its supports.

Lexington and Purcell are less than two miles apart. Since the bridge closure, commuters living in one town but working in another have been forced to take detours of roughly 40 miles, dramatically increasing commute times and fuel expenses. Safety concerns have also arisen as ambulances are being forced to take the same detours.

Fallin toured the bridge with local officials today, telling Purcell and Lexington residents that “help is on the way.”

“This bridge is a safety hazard and is at risk of collapse,” said

Editorial: Oklahoma third-grade reading law offers long-term benefits for students

IN its new Kids Count data snapshot, the Annie E. Casey Foundation says 79 percent of low-income Oklahoma fourth-graders aren't reading proficiently, based on National Assessment of Educational Progress data. The problem isn't limited to the poor. The foundation reports 57 percent of higher-income Oklahoma fourth-graders also aren't proficient in reading.

These findings justify alarm. As the foundation report notes, "If we do not make sure all children gain the needed reading skills to be successful in school, their future educational and economic prospects will be dim, and our economy will lag."

Oklahoma policymakers are aggressively addressing this problem. A state law taking effect this year requires retention of third-grade students who are several years behind in reading proficiency. While

Tulsa World: Fallin Plan an Upbeat, Conservative Vision

We found much to like in Gov. Mary Fallin's State of the State speech Monday.

We agree with Fallin's assessment that the state of the state is strong. While some of that has to do with the luck of commodity prices and geology, Fallin's leadership also deserves due credit.

When she came to office, the state had a $500 million budget hole and $2.03 in its "rainy day" fund. Today the state's budget is balanced and the emergency fund has $530 million in it. Meanwhile, unemployment and tax rates are down.

If Fallin takes some public pride in that turnaround, we say it is deserved.

In her plans for the coming year we are particularly pleased with her evolving attitude toward the Justice Reinvestment Initiative.

The initiative is a proven strategy for saving money on prisons while reducing crime. Fallin signed the Oklahoma version of the

The Lawton Constitution: Shelters: Gov. Fallin's Plan Makes Sense

By: The Lawton Constitution Editorial Board

Gov. Mary Fallin is backing a good, local-option plan to help improve safety and security at public schools. Legislators should give serious consideration to House Joint Resolution 1092, which contains Fallin's ideas.

The plan would let voters approve a one-time increase in schools' bonded indebtedness capacity, sell debt and add local real estate taxes to build storm shelters and address other similar issues. Districts in which local patrons see the need and want to proceed should have that option. About 700 of 1,800 school buildings have safe rooms or storm shelters, Fallin said.

As was noted in Monday's Constitution, patrons in several schools in Jackson County are ahead of the state. They either have built an underground classroom facility or a storm shelter or are preparing to build a storm shelter from metal shipping containers, using volunteer

My Priorities for the 2014 Legislative Session

By Governor Mary Fallin

As February begins, so too does another legislative session in Oklahoma. This year I had the honor of giving my fourth State of the State address, delivering my executive budget and outlining an agenda for forward progress and economic growth.

These are the topics I addressed and the priorities I believe our legislative session should focus on.

Job creation:

Oklahoma's economy has made a dramatic turnaround since the Great Recession. Our pro-growth policies are making a significant contribution to that comeback. Today, the unemployment rate has dropped from 7.2 percent to just 5.4 percent. Oklahoma families have also seen their incomes rise by over 6.3 percent since January 2011. That's 44 percent higher than the national average and second in the nation.

We need to continue to build that forward momentum by pursuing pro-growth policies that help

OKLAHOMA CITY – Dry conditions continue to persist across Oklahoma with over 64% of the state in drought, according to the U.S. Drought Monitor. Governor Mary Fallin continues to encourage all Oklahomans to implement water conservation practices to ensure future water availability and protect the state's water resources.

"Low water levels due to drought are having serious effects on our economy, and are particularly harmful to communities that rely on Oklahoma lakes for tourism and recreation," said Fallin. "Industries as diverse as tourism, agriculture and energy are all directly affected by the state's water supply.

"State government has a lot of room to be more responsible with its energy usage," Fallin said. "Every dollar saved on energy costs is a dollar better used back in the hands of taxpayers or by core government services. We believe this is the most ambitious behavior-based energy savings program any state government has undertaken,

Get 2014 off to a Healthy Start

By Governor Mary Fallin

With the holiday season behind us, it is a good time to refocus our lives and reevaluate our goals. At the beginning of every year one of the top resolutions for many people is to lose weight, get in shape and live healthier lives.

Change can be difficult and at times seem nearly impossible, but committing to change is important for the sake of our families, our longevity and for our wallets. Bad habits can contribute to a shorter life expectancy and can needlessly drive up the cost of medical bills and health care for everyone.

The good news is – Oklahomans have begun to take notice and we are starting to see the needle move in the right direction, and our citizens are becoming healthier.

Looking back at last year we made major strides in improving our overall health as a state. Smoking rates of adults decreased from 26 percent to 23 percent; at the Capitol we opened our new fitness

The tragedy of those storms was devastating; but the volunteer spirit, the fearlessness of our first responders, and the generosity of our people was inspiring. Today, organizations like the OKStrong Disaster Relief Fund run by the United Way have raised millions of dollars for

Governor Mary Fallin Statement on Release of NAEP Scores

11/07/2013 03:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement regarding the release of Oklahoma’s 2013 National Assessment of Educational Progress (NAEP) scores. The scores test the proficiency of fourth and eighth grade students in English and math. For more details, view the scores and the State Department of Education’s press release here.

“This year’s NAEP scores represent mixed results for Oklahoma schools. As a state, we are improving. Fourth grade math scores, for instance, are the highest they have been in ten years. That’s great news. We have the hard work of Oklahoma teachers, administrators, parents and students to thank for that forward progress. It’s also an indication that some of our reform efforts are beginning to deliver results.

“Oklahoma continues, however,

Governor Mary Fallin’s Feeding Oklahoma Food Drive Exceeds Goal

Raises More than 2.9 Million Meals for Hungry Oklahomans

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin’s fourth annual Feeding Oklahoma Food Drive raised more than 2.9 million meals for hungry Oklahomans this holiday season. The drive, which ran throughout October, exceeded its goal of raising 1.4 million meals. In total, the drive raised $390,659 and 1,179,087 pounds of food. A portion of the donations will also benefit Oklahomans impacted by the May tornadoes.

“I am continually overwhelmed by the support and generosity shown by Oklahomans in all 77 counties, and this year’s food drive proves to be no different,” Fallin said. “I want to especially thank all the sponsors and the caring people of this state who donated their time and resources to help feed our neighbors in Oklahoma. Oklahoma is a great place because of its people. Their support of this food drive ensures more Oklahoma families will have

Oklahoma National Guard Acts on Same Sex Benefits

New Policy Protects Oklahoma Constitution and Oklahoma Laws

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin, after consulting with Oklahoma Attorney General Scott Pruitt and Oklahoma Adjutant General Myles Deering, today announced that National Guard facilities and employees funded with state dollars will not process benefits for married, same-sex couples. The Oklahoma Constitution explicitly defines marriage as between a man and a woman. It also prohibits the conveyance of marriage benefits onto same sex couples. It is therefore illegal for state employees or state-funded facilities to process same sex benefits. The provision of the Oklahoma Constitution defining marriage was added as the result of a 2004 ballot provision that passed with 75 percent of the popular vote.

Last week, Defense Secretary Chuck Hagel ordered the National Guard to comply with federal rules that recognize same sex benefits. In response to that order, General

In addition to serving on Governor Mary Fallin’s cabinet, Sommers also serves as the director of the Oklahoma Department of Career and Technology Education. Previously, he served as the superintendent of Butler Technology and Career Development Schools in Ohio.

“As a superintendent, I championed the use of data to reform my school district. In 2001, the data showed my district was doing poorly. We were ranked 42nd out of 49 Ohio tech centers.

“In response to that ranking, which revealed that our students were underperforming, our staff and student body committed ourselves to improvement. After a lot of hard work, we were eventually ranked first in student performance for three years in a row.

Gov. Fallin Statement on Release of A-F Grades for Oklahoma Public Schools

11/06/2013 02:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the Oklahoma State Department of Education’s release of A-F grades for public schools. The grades are available online at afreportcards.ok.gov.

"Delivering high quality public education is one of the most important things we can do in Oklahoma to increase prosperity in our state. Good schools teach children the skills they need to succeed when they enter the workforce or pursue post-secondary education. They also help to produce the highly skilled workforce that we need to retain and attract businesses and jobs to Oklahoma.

"We have many great teachers and schools that are helping to produce positive outcomes and improve student performance. Those teachers and schools deserve recognition. Unfortunately, we know we are also falling short in many areas. Historically below average NAEP scores in reading,

Tulsa World: Robert Sommers: Schools matter in student performance

By Robert Sommers

The Oklahoma Legislature established a school-by-school A-F grading system in 2011. The system is designed to provide parents and communities with a clear understanding of how well their schools are doing.

A group of researchers at the University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University have decided to oppose the A-F school grading system because they consider it unfair.

Unfortunately, their sense of what is fair is based on flawed thinking about educational quality and gives little credit to great educators.

Particularly troubling is their claim that schools have little influence over student performance. The study criticizes the grading system — designed to give parents an easily understood measurement of school quality — arguing that it is unfair to hold schools accountable for student performance.

In fact, the authors argue that the effect of public schools on student test results is only

Governor Mary Fallin Clarifies Position on School Funding and A-F Grading

11/05/2013 12:30 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – On Sunday, the Tulsa World reported that Governor Mary Fallin's spokesman Alex Weintz criticized a report issued by professors from OU and OSU that attacked the substance of the A-F public school grading system. The World reports:

Weintz said the governor is "dismayed" to see groups representing the education community touting a report issued by researchers at University of Oklahoma and Oklahoma State University as a way to wage a campaign against A-F.

Weintz cited a portion of the report that he said indicates the authors believe that schools are only responsible for 20 to 30 percent of student achievement. In that portion, the authors question whether school performance should be based solely on student standardized test results.

Weintz said Fallin believes test scores are an adequate way to

A-F Grades for Schools will Help Improve Public Education

11/04/2013 04:00 PM CST

Oklahoma has great teachers and great schools. No one deserves more respect or thanks than our teachers, who are doing difficult and important jobs for modest salaries. Many teachers make a profound difference in the lives of their students, instilling them with academic passions that lead to successful careers and fulfilling lives.

These successes should be applauded and celebrated. But just as we should not ignore our many successes, nor should we turn a blind eye to our system's shortcomings. Those shortcomings are real: data from the National Assessment of Educational Progress, for instance, shows that 73 percent of Oklahoma fourth graders are below proficient in reading and 66 percent are below proficient in Math. Furthermore, when our high school graduates reach college, they are often doing so without the skill-sets needed to succeed in college courses. More than two in every five Oklahoma college students must take remedial courses, adding time and expense

When she announced earlier this year that she planned to combine the cabinet posts of secretary of the energy and the secretary of the environment, many were skeptical of Republican Gov. Mary Fallin’s idea.

Environmentalists worried that the new secretary – whoever he or she was – would simply be a shill for the oil and gas industry. Oil and gas supporters complained that they needed someone experienced who understood their needs and not a tree-hugger.

Enter retired Col. Michael Teague.

Teague, the former commander of the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers Tulsa District, was named as the new secretary of energy and environment in August.

So far, the colonel is off to an excellent start.

10/23/2013 10:00 AM CDT

By: Governor Mary Fallin, Executive Director of the Regional Food Bank of Oklahoma Rodney Bivens, and Executive Director of the Community Food Bank of Eastern Oklahoma Eileen Bradshaw

Hunger does not discriminate against race or gender. Hunger envelopes families and entire communities, and in Oklahoma it affects 675,000 people.

The statistics are distressing: one in six Oklahomans wake up each morning not knowing where their next meal may come from; one in four Oklahoma children are at risk of going hungry daily.

Oklahoma consistently ranks in the top 10 hungriest states in the nation. In May, our state was devastated by the tornadoes, further increasing the number of families who are food-insecure in Oklahoma. Oklahoma food banks provide enough food for more than 150,000 people each week, and that demand increases during the holidays.

As the holiday season approaches and all of its wonderful meals are being planned,

By World’s Editorial Writers

Posted: Sept. 12

Gov. Mary Fallin tied the final ribbon around the special legislative session Tuesday, signing all 23 bills that the Legislature sent to her.

The week-long special session restored common-sense lawsuit reform measures originally passed in 2009, when Gov. Brad Henry signed them into law.

The measures protect people doing business in the state without giving away the rights of people with legitimate cases.

Earlier this summer, the Oklahoma Supreme Court declared the 2009 laws unconstitutional largely because many of them were rolled into one statute - violating the state Constitution's ban on multiple-topic legislation.

The special session unwound the big law into bite-sized pieces, all of which passed.

The most contentious piece of the puzzle was the so-called certificate of merit bill, which requires a relevant expert

Governor Fallin Announces Extension of Insure Oklahoma

Major Victory for State Saves Thousands of Oklahomans from Losing Health Insurance

OKLAHOMA CITY – In a major victory for Oklahomans, Governor Mary Fallin today announced the state of Oklahoma has negotiated a one year extension for the Insure Oklahoma program. The program provides health insurance for nearly 30,000 working, low-income Oklahomans. It is funded by the state's tobacco tax matched with federal dollars. Earlier this year, the federal government announced it would not continue its support of Insure Oklahoma and the state should expect the program to expire at the beginning of 2014.

After the announcement that Insure Oklahoma would expire, Fallin directly contacted both President Obama and Secretary of Health and Human Services Kathleen Sebelius to underscore the importance of the program to the state. Officials with the Oklahoma Health Care Authority, at the governor's direction, also spent months in

Governor Mary Fallin Signs Extradition Order for Dusten Brown

09/04/2013 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed the extradition order for Dusten Brown, the biological father of "Baby Veronica."

Brown is contesting Veronica's adoption to Matt and Melanie Capobianco of Charleston, South Carolina. His arguments have now been rejected by the United States Supreme Court as well as courts in South Carolina and Oklahoma.

South Carolina Governor Nikki Haley requested Brown's extradition from Oklahoma to South Carolina on August 13. Brown, who has refused to release Veronica to her adopted parents, faces charges of custodial interference in South Carolina.

Brown's extradition does not affect the current placement of Baby Veronica.

"My goal in the Baby Veronica case has been to encourage both Mr. Brown and the Capobianco family to reach a quick settlement and come to an agreement that protects Veronica's best interests," Fallin said. "I said

Special Session: Why Lawsuit Reform Must be Addressed Now

09/03/2013 03:15 PM CDT

The legislative session usually runs from February to May, but this year, legislators are returning to the Capitol in the first week of September.

I have asked them to return to work for a "Special Session" to address an issue I think is of high importance to the state, our medical community and our prospects for economic growth and job creation. That issue is lawsuit reform.

First, a brief history lesson: In 2009, Oklahoma was facing a legal climate that many believed was hostile to businesses and encouraged frivolous lawsuits. These lawsuits were particularly damaging to doctors and medical professionals, who were frequent targets of medical malpractice claims. This was becoming a larger and larger problem; the number of medical malpractice payments was almost 10 percent larger in 2009 than the year before.

The results were predictable. Businesses were afraid to invest in a state where they could anticipate spending a large

Editorial: Tulsa World: Now is the time to deal with lawsuit reform

09/03/2013 01:15 PM CDT

The Oklahoma Legislature begins a special session Tuesday to reconfigure the state's lawsuit reform statutes.

The statutes were passed in 2009 and 2011, but were killed earlier this year by the Oklahoma Supreme Court.

Among other things, the 2009 law restricted court-shopping for class-action lawsuits and contained a provision for the review of attorney fees in class-action suits. It also limited non-economic damages, such as pain and suffering.

The Supreme Court ruled that the 2009 law dealt with more than one topic and was therefore unconstitutional, although another non-economic damage cap law remains in effect.

The 2011 law required expert certification for professional negligence cases, such as malpractice suits.

The high court found that was an unconstitutional monetary barrier to justice.

Now, Gov. Mary Fallin proposes cutting up the pre-existing law into smaller, “Oklahoma has great teachers and great schools. If we increase rigor in the classroom, students will rise to the challenge. We know that requiring

Governor Mary Fallin Suspends GRDA Taskforce

08/13/2013 01:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today announced that she is suspending a taskforce designed to study the operations of the Grand River Dam Authority (GRDA). Fallin said that while she still supports the mission of the taskforce, its work might unintentionally and negatively affect the GRDA’s future bond ratings.

The GRDA board is expected to vote as early as this Wednesday on the creation of a new natural gas-fired power plant. The project, estimated to cost $300 million, would be paid for by bonds let through the GRDA.

GRDA board members previously delayed voting on the new power plant at Fallin's request. In July, the governor asked board members to take more time to review the issue and to wait on the recommendations of an independent study. They did so, and Fallin says she is now satisfied that GRDA leadership has done their due diligence and is able to make an informed decision.

The executive order calls on lawmakers to re-institute components of House Bill 1603, a comprehensive lawsuit reform package signed into law in 2009.

HB 1603 was designed to reduce the number of frivolous lawsuits and medical malpractice claims filed in Oklahoma, making the state more business friendly and protecting Oklahoma physicians from frivolous lawsuits. It was passed with bipartisan support and signed into law by Democratic Governor Brad Henry.

Earlier this year, the law was struck down by the Oklahoma Supreme Court for violating the Constitution's "single-subject" rule, a prohibition on legislative logrolling. Fallin is calling on legislators to separate the law into appropriate bills, thus reinstating the That’s why we’re emphasizing the importance of STEM - that’s Science, Technology, Engineering and Math – at our high schools, colleges and career techs.

We’re also developing unique, one of a kind resources that will make Oklahoma the destination in the United States for one of aerospace’s

May was a difficult, heart wrenching month for the state of Oklahoma. The lives of at least 40 men, women and children were cut short by tornadoes that ripped through towns and cities. Hundreds were injured, some severely. Almost 4,000 homes and businesses were damaged or destroyed.

In the wake of these terrible storms, we saw suffering and loss. But we also saw something else: an Oklahoma Spirit that would not be broken and would not be defeated.

Resilience. Courage. Compassion. And above all, strength. Those were the defining characteristics of our state and its people at this crucial moment.

It was a time for loss; but it was also a time for hope and for pride in our Oklahoma heroes. First responders rushed to the scene, risking their own safety to pull people out of the wreckage of homes and buildings.

Additionally, she worked with lawmakers to pass landmark reforms in the areas of workers’ compensation, government efficiency, mental health, child welfare, public safety, education and more.

House Bill 1782, also by Russ and Griffin, permits emergency responders to administer lifesaving medication to counteract a prescription drug overdose.

Earlier in the legislative session, the governor signed into law HB 1781, which allows the Oklahoma Department of Mental Health and Substance Abuse Services (ODMHSAS) to access key, non-identifiable information regarding prescription drug use from the Oklahoma Bureau of Narcotics and Dangerous Drugs for research purposes, to identify areas where drugs are being overprescribed and abused in order to aid in the prevention of prescription drug

Gov. Mary Fallin did more than tell state workers and others Wednesday to develop healthy habits. She led them on a walk around the state Capitol complex.

It's the second year Fallin has led the Governor's Walk for Wellness. About 225 people, mostly state workers, but also agency heads, members of Fallin's Cabinet and some workers from the private sector took part in the walk around the north lawn of the state Capitol.

“We can make a difference in our personal health,” Fallin, wearing an Oklahoma City Thunder T-shirt, told the crowd. “We can make a difference in the state's health.”

Oklahoma made baby steps last year in improving its health rankings by the United Health Foundation: Oklahoma moved up to 43 from 46. Its rankings showed 31.2 percent adults in Oklahoma are physically inactive compared with 26.2 percent nationally; 26.1 percent of Oklahomans smoke

Bill Also Includes Funding for State Capitol Repairs

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law a landmark income tax reduction bill. House Bill 2032 would cut the top income tax rate from 5.25 percent to 5.0 percent on January 1, 2015. It would cut the rate further, to 4.85 percent, in 2016. Once fully realized, the tax cut would pump $237 million into the private sector.

Fallin said the income tax cut was an important tool for job creation and economic development.

“One of the first questions I get when I am talking to business owners throughout the country is, ‘if I come to Oklahoma, are you going to raise my taxes?’” Fallin said. “Passing a significant and responsible tax cut will help us to recruit these businesses and retain the ones we already have. Our tax cut will ultimately lead to more job opportunities for all Oklahomans.”

will join her in the walk around the Capitol complex. The event serves to raise awareness for worksite wellness programs.

Oklahoma ranks 43rd in the nation in health outcomes, according to the United Health Foundation's America's Health Rankings report. Worksite wellness programs can help improve the state's ranking by encouraging employees to eat better, move more and be tobacco free. Worksite wellness programs also benefit employers by reducing healthcare costs and absenteeism, increasing worker productivity and attracting new employees to the business.

With a budget deal reached and a flurry of important legislation ready to be signed into law, it is clear that the 2013 legislative session will be a constructive, even historic, time for lawmakers.

On three major fronts, legislative leaders and I have made substantial progress on policies that will bring more good-paying, high-quality jobs to Oklahoma: reducing the state's income tax, overhauling the workers' compensation system and addressing the state's long-term infrastructure needs.

Our income tax reduction plan lowers the state's top tax rate by 0.25 percent, to 5 percent, starting in 2015, and lowers that rate even further, to 4.85 percent, the following year. Once fully realized, our tax cut will pump more than $200 million a

The bill, by Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman and House Speaker T.W. Shannon, seeks to reduce costs for businesses. It moves the state from a court-based workers' compensation system to an administrative system, allowing for more timely processing of claims and reducing the adversarial nature of the process for both workers and employers.

“For decades, Oklahoma has had one of the most expensive and inefficient workers' compensation systems in the country, a constant obstacle for business owners looking to expand operations or create more jobs,” Fallin said. “Senate Bill 1062 completely overhauls our flawed workers' comp system, dramatically reducing the

These shortcomings are particularly disturbing in light of multiple accusations of abuse and neglect aimed at agency staff, some of which may have resulted in the death of Oklahoma veterans.

But now we know the insurance plans offered through Obamacare's state exchanges will have much more limited provider networks than those offered elsewhere; doctor choices will be restricted. Also, a recent Deloitte Center for Health Solutions survey found that 62 percent of physicians believe it's “likely” that many doctors will retire earlier than Researchers are developing plants that are drought tolerant, bridges with sensors embedded in the concrete to measure stress, and batteries that are microscopic for use in less invasive health equipment.

These are among the fascinating research and products being invented here in Oklahoma. They are of global significance and are happening right here in our own backyard.

These industries also present great potential for economic success in our state. To capitalize on the great work in science and technology related fields already happening here, I have asked the Oklahoma Department of Commerce to develop a data-driven plan that will help us focus our policies on industries that have the greatest potential for wealth generation and job growth.

Governor Mary Fallin Signs House Bill 1999

03/29/2013 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin today signed House Bill 1999, a bill ending the prohibition on horse meat processing for export in Oklahoma. Forty-six states, not including Oklahoma, currently allow horsemeat processing.

Governor Fallin released the following statement:

“In Oklahoma – as in other states – abuse is tragically common among horses that are reaching the end of their natural lives. Many horses are abandoned or left to starve to death. Others are shipped out of the country, many to Mexico, where they are processed in potentially inhumane conditions that are not regulated by the U.S. government.

“Unfortunately, the 2006 federal ban on horse processing plants has made this situation worse. After the implementation of that ban, the Government Accountability Office reported a 60 percent increase in abused, neglected and starved horses. The U.S. Department of Agriculture has also noted that over 166,000

“Areas of Oklahoma were inundated with heavy snow during this weather event, causing widespread infrastructure damage and resulting in significant costs related to emergency response,” Fallin said. “The disaster declaration will provide assistance to help municipalities, counties and rural electric cooperatives in the affected areas to cover the costs associated with responding to this significant winter storm.”

The counties included in this request are: Alfalfa, Beaver, Beckham, Blaine, Custer, Dewey, Ellis, Garfield,

It also aims to reduce the recidivism rate by providing supervision for those who have been released from prison.

The law also gives courts the option to use a presentence risk and needs-assessments/evaluations to help guide sentencing decisions regarding the most appropriate level of punishment, supervision, and treatment for each offender.

“Lower taxes mean stronger economic growth and more job creation. It’s important for businesses to see that, even as other states and the federal government pursue tax hikes, Oklahoma remains committed to lower taxes and smaller government.”

In the last two years, Oklahoma has made great strides in improving our overall health. Programs like the Certified Healthy initiatives are promoting healthier workplaces, schools and communities and helping us tackle health problems like obesity, Type 2 Diabetes and heart disease.

This year, my budget also includes more money to support prescription drug abuse prevention and treatment initiatives to help citizens overcome the challenges of substance abuse and addiction.

While these programs are working – we’ve moved from 49th in the country to 43rd in terms of health outcomes – there still is much work to be done to improve the health of Oklahoma.

By Michael McNutt | Published: March 2, 2013

Gov. Mary Fallin is calling for a major overhaul of Oklahoma's pension system, wanting to consolidate the staff, boards and offices of several pension plans into one and change to a defined contribution instead of the traditional plan for new state employees.

“While our state tax-supported bond debt is low, our $11 billion unfunded pension liability represents 7 percent of our gross state product,” Fallin wrote in state Treasurer Ken Miller's Oklahoma Economic Report that was distributed Friday on the Internet. “That means every Oklahoman is on the hook for $2,900 in pension debt.”

Fallin said Oklahoma has seven pension plans, six of which have independent boards, staff, offices, consultants and investment managers.

About 220,000 employees and retirees are part of the state's pension system; those covered include teachers, agency workers, police, troopers,

Gov. Fallin Statement on Sequestration

03/01/2013 08:45 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding sequestration and the looming federal budget cuts to the military and government agencies:

“Oklahoma agencies have had months to prepare for a reduction in federal funds. While it is still unclear how many dollars each state agency will lose, we do not expect an immediate loss in state services. Months ago, I asked my cabinet secretaries and state agency directors to plan ahead for sequestration. We believe the state is well-prepared.

“With that said, it is clear the sequester is creating a chaotic and uncertain environment for businesses looking to invest, state governments tasked with crafting budgets, and those who receive federal benefits or who work for or contract with the government. That uncertainty is bad for the economy and is destroying jobs. Furthermore, the large and seemingly haphazard cuts to military spending reduce the

The Lawton Constitution: Local Control of Smoking Makes Sense

Editorial

Gov. Mary Fallin took a courageous stand against what she correctly labeled “Oklahoma’s No. 1” killer in her State of the State address on Monday: Tobacco. Smoking and other tobacco products account for the death of 6,000 Oklahomans each year and cost Oklahomans billions of dollars in increased health care costs and lost workforce productivity. Reducing smoking in Oklahoma is not just a life-and-death issue, it’s a quality of life issue and an economic issue.

To help reduce smoking and the exposure to secondhand smoke, the governor is proposing the restoration of local rights to communities, which would now be able to

Roll Call: Markell and Fallin: Nation's Fiscal Health Depends on Flexible Federalism

02/08/2013 08:45 AM CST

By Govs. Jack Markell and Mary Fallin

States and the federal government are inseparable partners in creating a strong economic future for our country. What affects one partner affects the other. Just as governing a state is vital to the nation's fiscal health, federal decisions are vital to a state's fiscal health.

In January, we delivered this message at the National Governors Association's State of the States Address. While each governor faces his or her own specific circumstances, we all have to facilitate job growth, educate our kids and balance our budgets.

Our state economies are tightly linked to the national economy. We know that with federal spending cuts states will receive less, but it is the uncertainty of how much, from where and when that undercuts our budgets and slows economic growth.

One of the largest uncertainties concerns elements of the fiscal cliff that were postponed or left out of the American

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the opening of the Capitol Wellness Center, a new workout facility at the State Capitol that is part of Oklahoma's larger effort to improve citizen health.

"A year ago I ordered the Capitol smoking room closed and a wellness center built in its place as a symbol of our commitment to a healthier, happier Oklahoma. Opening this center today as we begin a new legislative session is real progress we should be proud of," Fallin said. "Staying healthy and fit has obvious personal benefits, but it also has wider benefits to our state and its economy. Healthy workers are more productive and have lower health care costs, which increases efficiency and drives down costs for public and private employers alike."

Secretary of Health Dr. Terry Cline said he expects the Capitol Wellness Center will help improve personal health and lower health care costs for state employees who use

Lurching from fiscal crisis to fiscal crisis in Washington is damaging the nation and makes the task of governing the states much more difficult, Gov. Mary Fallin said in a Washington speech Wednesday.

"It's hard for us as governors to write a budget," Fallin said in her speech at the National Press Club. "I have been working on my state budget ... (and) it keeps having to be adjusted."

The series of federal budget battles - which is on pace to recur with a federal debt limit fight in March - is damaging the nation, Fallin said.

Make Getting Fit Your New Year's Resolution in 2013

By Governor Mary Fallin

It's the beginning of a New Year, which means that many Oklahomans have made resolutions and personal goals for themselves for 2013. A lot of those resolutions probably include plans to get in shape and become more physically active.

I know as well as anyone that a resolution made on January 1 can seem daunting by January 31. But if improving your health and the health of your families is one of your goals, let me encourage you not to give up!

Getting fit isn't just important for our personal well being; it's an important pocketbook issue for Oklahoma families and a vital factor in the state's economic wellbeing. Unfortunately, we have a lot of work to do. A new study published in the Journal of the American Heart Association found that Oklahoma is the least heart healthy of all 50 states. Our

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today commented on the Oklahoma Board of Equalization certified revenue figures. According to the board, the governor will have approximately $7 billion in revenue to craft her budget for fiscal year 2014, an increase of $214.6 million, or 3.1 percent, from the previous year. However, the governor cautioned that fiscal uncertainty in Washington, D.C., called into question the availability of those funds.

Among the highlights, the figures show that Oklahoma K-12 schools will get an extra $78.6 million in the next fiscal year through the House Bill 1017 Education Reform Revolving Fund. Additionally, current revenue estimates indicate the state will deposit $66.4 million into the Rainy Day Fund (RDF), bringing the current balance of $577.5 million to approximately $643 million, the largest balance in the fund's history.

“The certification of an additional $214 million in revenue is

By Patrick B. McGuigan | CapitolBeatOK

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin told President Barack Obama the nation’s governors can help solve the federal financial crisis, but they’ll need more authority and fewer directives from Washington D.C.

Fallin was among a group of governors who met today with the president, Vice President Joe Biden and other administration staffers.

Speaking with reporters in a press call at midday, Fallin said she stressed four points on behalf of the delegation. The focus was the so-called “fiscal cliff,” the looming deadline for automatic budget and tax cuts.

Fallin said federal reforms should “produce savings for both the federal government and states.” She pointed to shared responsibility for running certain programs should also mean “shared savings.” As an example of

Rejecting Federal Health Care Bill Right Thing for Oklahoma

By Governor Mary Fallin

This past month, I announced Oklahoma would not implement two key components of President Obama’s health care law: the creation of a health insurance exchange and the expansion of Medicaid. I’m writing this month to let you know why that decision is in the best interests of Oklahoma taxpayers and families.

For several months, my staff and I have worked with other lawmakers, Oklahoma stakeholders and health care experts across the country to determine the best course of action for Oklahoma in regards to both a possible health insurance exchange and the potential expansion of Medicaid.

Our priority has been to ascertain what can be done to increase quality and access to health care, contain costs, and do so without placing an undue burden on taxpayers or the state. As I have stated many times before, it is my firm belief that the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA) fails to further these goals, and

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today voiced support for the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service’s proposal not to list the lesser prairie chicken as an “endangered species,” and to instead list it only as “threatened.” A federal listing of “endangered” comes with more punitive and job-killing restrictions that would harm economic activity like wind power development. In Oklahoma, the state has invested $26 million since 1996 in conservation efforts in over 563,000 acres in an attempt to protect the lesser prairie chicken.

“Officials in my administration along with other state agencies have been diligently working to conserve the habitat of the lesser prairie chicken while taking into account our desire to create jobs and support industry,” Fallin said. “I want to thank the members of my administration who have done a terrific job in representing Oklahoma stakeholders on this issue including

By Gov. Mary Fallin and Secretary of Veterans Affairs Maj. Gen. (Retired) Rita Aragon

For more than 350 years, brave men and women have worn the uniform of the United States Military in order to defend our freedom. These heroes have answered our nation’s call and served with honor and dignity. In return for their service, they deserve our respect, our gratitude and our profound appreciation for their dedication and sacrifice. That’s why, at the Oklahoma Capitol, working for our veterans continues to be a top priority. We can never fully repay the debt of gratitude owed to our veterans, but we can continue to pursue policies that recognize and honor their service.

Honoring our veterans starts with making sure they are properly equipped to do their job. That’s why we have personally visited Oklahoma National Guard facilities and troops preparing for deployment to ensure they have the best equipment and training

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today commended the Oklahoma State Regents for Higher Education, which officially approved the transfer of appropriated funds to reduce the backlog in the state’s matching funds program for endowed chairs at their meeting Thursday.

The Regents’ Endowment Fund Program, created in 1988, is a one-to-one matching program for state and private donations to fund academic positions and other related projects, mostly in the areas of science, technology and math, at Oklahoma’s public colleges and universities.

Due to the popularity of the program and the amount of private contributions raised, the state had recently fallen behind in matching contributions, resulting in a backlog of $282.3 million. During the 2012 legislative session, Governor Fallin signed into law Senate Bill 1969, which authorized the transfer of $141.9 million to reduce the backlog in the endowed chairs program.

Statement on Audit of American Indian Cultural Museum

10/17/2012 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – A statement from the office of the governor:

“Governor Fallin asked for an audit of the Native American Cultural and Educational Authority (NACEA) earlier this year to help decide the best way to move this American Indian Cultural Center and Museum project forward.

The audit makes it clear that the NACEA needs to be operated more efficiently and effectively than it has been in the past. There are many factors that have lead to these outcomes and the delays in the project’s completion have in turn wasted taxpayer resources due to increased materials costs, as well as delaying the generation of revenue.

However, with the addition of new leadership last year, Governor Fallin feels the NACEA has begun to correct many of the issues addressed in the audit.

Moving forward, it is important for the Legislature, NACEA leadership and all stakeholders to work together to ensure that this project, which the state

While these men and women come from diverse backgrounds and fields – academic, corporate and political – they all have two things in common: they are on the cutting edge of one of the most important job creating industries in the world; and they are leading the charge towards American energy independence.

For decades, energy independence was thought to be out of reach. New drilling techniques like hydraulic fracturing and horizontal drilling, the discovery

The Oklahoman: Septemberfest delights visitors to Oklahoma Governor's Mansion

09/10/2012 09:15 AM CDT

By Zeke Campfield | Published: September 9, 2012

Nothing tempers the chill of partisan politics like a Saturday afternoon of sunshine and family — even when it's the governor who plays host.

Well, perhaps seeing a unique swimming pool also would be nice.

For Carson Kardokus, 9, at Septemberfest with his mom, dad and two younger brothers, nothing short of both would do the trick.

“He wants to see the swimming pool because it's apparently shaped like the state of Oklahoma, or at least that's what we heard,” said Kardokus's mother, Shannon, who corralled her sons into Gov. Mary Fallin's mansion for a quick tour. Her youngest son, Creed, carried a stuffed Clifford the Big Red Dog under his arm.

Earlier that morning, Fallin read a story to the boys and other children out on the mansion lawn, Shannon Kardokus said. A petting zoo, inflatable toys and

Exemptions Added to Statewide Burn Ban

Burn Ban Remains in Effect Due to Continued Wildfire Danger

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced that exemptions have been added to the statewide burn ban, although the Governor's Burn Ban continues to remain in effect. The decision was made in consultation with Oklahoma Forestry Services, a division of the Department of Agriculture, Food and Forestry, and based on existing wildfire fuel conditions and ongoing drought.

"I understand the length of this burn ban has made it difficult for some, particularly our agriculture producers," said Fallin. "Therefore, exemptions are being added to allow for the use of fire under very specific, controlled conditions. Existing exemptions, including those related to grilling, road construction, welding and oilfield operations, will remain in place."

Under the amended burn ban,

08/24/2012 08:15 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin was notified today in a letter from Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) Administrator Craig Fugate that assistance for individuals and business owners impacted by recent wildfires in Cleveland, Oklahoma and Payne counties has been denied. The letter (see attachment) states “it has been determined that the damage to the dwellings from wildfires in Cleveland, Oklahoma and Payne counties was not of such severity and magnitude to warrant the designation of Individual Assistance for these counties.” Today’s decision comes on the heels of yesterday’s announcement that Creek County was approved for individual assistance.

“I am extremely disappointed in FEMA’s decision to deny disaster assistance to all Oklahomans who have been tragically impacted by these fires,” said Governor Fallin. “It seems ridiculous to me that houses lost in fires occurring within the same period, on the

Despite the declaration's failure to be inclusive of the governor's complete request, all those who have sustained wildfire damage since July 28 are urged to call 1-800-621-FEMA (3362) or go online at www.disasterassistance.gov and go ahead and report their damage. Even though we are early into the season, at least 61 cases and three deaths have been reported in Oklahoma. The best way to prevent West Nile virus is to avoid mosquito bites.”

Fallin urged Oklahomans to “fight the bite” by taking personal precautions to reduce the risk of mosquito bites, including using insect repellent when going outdoors, installing or repairing screens on windows and doors, and emptying standing water

“With wildfires having devastated huge portions of the state in the last several days, many rural fire departments are low on resources and in need of help,” Fallin said. “These grants will help replace broken equipment and supply firefighters with the resources they need to do their jobs safely. We support our firefighters 100 percent and stand behind them as they work to protect Oklahoma families and communities from the threat of

During Wildfire Crisis, Oklahoma Standard Emerges Once Again

By Governor Mary Fallin

The month of August started like the month of July ended: hot, dry and windy. In other words, the conditions were perfect for wildfires.

Difficult summers, however, are something we're used to. In response to the weather and in anticipation of wildfires, I placed all 77 counties under a State of Emergency due to drought. When dozens of fires broke out across the state, Oklahomans were prepared.

Because of the statewide emergency declaration, state and local governments were able to make emergency purchases and immediately begin protecting their communities. And although they couldn't stop the fires that spread across the state—especially those that may have been started maliciously and intentionally

“In the past few days, countless Oklahomans have reached out to my office to ask how they can help first responders and those who have lost their homes to wildfires,” Fallin said. “While there are many opportunities to offer assistance, two of the most reliable and effective aid groups continue to be the Salvation Army and the Red Cross.”

“As I’ve travelled across the state, I’ve seen their volunteers handing out water and food to firefighters and helping families in need. For those Oklahomans who want to offer their assistance

The governor's statewide burn ban supersedes all county burn bans currently in place and remains in place until conditions improve and it is removed by the governor.

"Extreme heat and ongoing drought have created conditions very conducive to wildfires," Fallin said. "A statewide burn ban is now necessary to reduce the risk of preventable wildfires and to protect lives and property.

"Moving forward, we need the public to be extremely vigilant. Lit cigarettes, flat tires and cars parked in dry grass can quickly

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act:

"Oklahomans have voiced their opposition to the federal health care bill from the very beginning, having approved a constitutional amendment to block the implementation of this bill in our state. We believe that, rather than Big Government bureaucracy and one-size-fits-all solutions, the free-market principles of choice and competition are the best tools at our disposal to increase access to health care and reduce costs.

"I'm extremely disappointed and frustrated by the Supreme Court's decision to uphold the federal health care law. CALGARY -- Oklahoma's governor directed a blast at U.S. President Barack Obama Tuesday for holding up a Keystone XL Pipeline she argues will greatly benefit her state.

During a two-day visit to the Global Petroleum Show, Republican Mary Fallin said the president is ignoring the importance of the oil industry to the U.S. and states like hers.

"The president doesn't understand the magnitude of the energy sector and how it can generate strength in the economy," Fallin said during a visit to the Oklahoma government pavilion on the Calgary Stampede grounds.

Obama has turned down approval of the pipeline's leg between the Canadian border and a terminus at Cushing, in northeastern Oklahoma, argely over environmental concerns.

She said the trip helped her understand the connection between Oklahoma and Canada, with state companies lending their expertise to the development of a massive resource base in Alberta.

"It all comes back to benefit Oklahoma," the governor said, pointing to figures from the

By Michael McNutt, Oklahoman

An agreement to cut the state's top personal income tax rate of 5.25 percent down to 4.8 percent next year was announced Thursday evening by GOP legislative leaders and Gov. Mary Fallin.

The plan, reached after two weeks of intense negotiations, also includes a one-time additional tax cut tied to a revenue growth trigger in the 2015 fiscal year.

If state revenue grows by at least 5 percent in that year, the income tax rate would be reduced further to 4.5 percent effective Jan. 1, 2015, but if revenue doesn't grow by that amount, the tax rate would not change. The 5 percent trigger is based on the growth of personal income, sales, use, motor vehicle and corporate tax collections.

The deal was announced after a day of meetings, including the governor talking to the GOP House caucus. Senate Republicans at first didn't embrace the plan, but about noon asked to resume talks. The talks continued until

“We owe our gratitude to the men and women of the U.S. Armed Forces for their service and sacrifice. The men and women in our military, as well as all of our veterans, possess some of the most unique skill sets in the world,” Fallin said. “The Post-Military Service Occupation, Education and Credentialing Act will give veterans credit for the experience they gained in service of the country and provide them the help they deserve to find jobs and re-enter the workforce once their service is complete.”

SB 1863 would allow Oklahoma colleges, university and technology centers to provide academic credit to a military veteran, who was honorably discharged in the previous three years, for any applicable education, training

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today approved rules submitted by the Oklahoma State Department of Education (SDE) establishing an A-F report card system to grade school performance. The rules were adopted by the State Board of Education in March, based on a law (HB 1456) enacted by the Legislature and signed by Governor Fallin in 2011.

Fallin said the law, as well as the rules submitted by the SDE, are part of a comprehensive effort to improve performance and accountability measures at public schools.

“Nothing is more important to the future of this state than improving our schools,” Fallin said. “Job growth and prosperity are directly linked to workforce quality and educational achievement. All of those things require high-quality educational institutions at every level.”

“To ensure that we are providing quality schools that are serving our children well and to identify those instances where we are not,

Governor Fallin is spokesperson for OKDHS public service announcement

05/01/2012 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin has partnered with the Oklahoma Department of Human Services (OKDHS) to encourage more Oklahomans to become foster and adoptive parents.

Fallin issued a proclamation recognizing May as Foster Care Awareness Month in Oklahoma and she is serving as spokesperson for the statewide OKDHS public service announcement (PSA) campaign. Fallin appears in a PSA urging Oklahomans to get involved and "change a child's lifetime."

More than 8,000 children and youth are currently in foster care and there is an urgent need for foster and adoptive families, especially for teenagers, sibling groups and children who have special medical or physical needs. For those who may not be able to foster children, there are other ways to get involved such as volunteering at a local children's shelter, hosting a toy drive, or becoming a trained volunteer to assist with home studies.

Oklahoman: Oklahoma's Gov. Fallin leads effort to seek affordable CNG vehicles

05/01/2012 08:45 AM CDT

Oklahoma's governor and 12 other governors write to nearly 20 auto manufacturers asking them to produce more affordable compressed natural gas vehicles.

By Michael McNutt, Oklahoman

Gov. Mary Fallin, joined by 12 other governors, asked nearly 20 auto manufacturers Monday to produce more affordable compressed natural gas vehicles for state fleets that would be available for the average car buyer, too.

The nonpartisan effort, first announced last fall by Fallin and Colorado Gov. John Hickenlooper, also would increase the demand for natural gas and likely reverse plummeting natural gas prices, which would aid energy-rich states such as Oklahoma.

Natural gas producers pay a state tax on their production so new markets should help the state's coffers and make it more of a reliable revenue stream.

“Despite their potential as a much more affordable form of transportation, CNG vehicles continue to be held back

Governor Fallin: Oklahomans Need a Significant Income Tax Cut Signed into Law This Year

04/30/2012 05:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the urgent need for Oklahoma lawmakers to pass and sign into law a significant reduction in the state income tax:

“Oklahoma families need and deserve a significant income tax reduction. Cutting taxes will not only allow our citizens to keep more of their hard earned money, it will also make Oklahoma a more competitive state to do business in and will help to create more and better jobs. Pursuing income tax cuts and tax simplification continue to be a priority of mine as I work with lawmakers to enact policies that will help to grow Oklahoma’s economy.

“Earlier this year, I proposed the ‘Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act,’ a bold plan to dramatically cut taxes, reduce the total number of tax brackets from seven to three, and set the stage for the gradual elimination of the income tax. That plan is one of several tax-cut plans

The letter refers to a multi-state Request for Information (RFI), asking manufacturers to provide background and information in anticipation of a multi-state solicitation later this year. Participating states include: Oklahoma, Colorado, Wyoming, Pennsylvania, Utah, Maine, New Mexico, West Virginia, Kentucky, Texas, Ohio, Mississippi and Louisiana.

KJRH Channel 2: Governor signs bill lowering turnpike penalties

04/26/2012 11:30 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - The penalty for running an Oklahoma turnpike toll without the correct change is changing.

Tuesday, Governor Mary Fallin signed a new bill, changing the penalty to one flat fee.

Soon, tickets will always cost $25.00, instead of increasing each time, to $50.00 and up to $75.00.

The Oklahoma Turnpike Authority asked the legislature to make the change.

"We wanted to create more of customer interaction that would hopefully entice them to become a Pikepass customer," said Jack Damrill, a spokesperson for the Oklahoma Turnpike Authority.

Damrill said the reduced fines are a gesture of goodwill towards drivers.

"We felt like our current structure, 25-50-75 was too punitive," said Damrill.

The Turnpike Authority hopes when customers call to deal with tickets they will be interested in getting a Pikepass.

"We can talk to them about becoming a customer and the Findings from a recently released statewide survey conducted by Gov. Mary Fallin and the Oklahoma Department of Commerce reveal some very positive trends for Oklahoma and the Tulsa area.

A closer look at Tulsa County's results suggests that businesses in our area, like those across the entire state, are optimistic and are hiring, which is a good sign that we are recovering from what has been a tough few years.

More than 5,300 companies participated in the FallinforBusiness.com online questionnaire, the largest statewide survey of businesses ever conducted in Oklahoma.

The responding companies represented more than 250,000 jobs, or 20 percent of Oklahoma's workforce. Of the companies that responded to the survey, 451 are located in Tulsa County.

A leading economic indicator is job creation and the extent to which Tulsa-area business are hiring. Statewide, 37 percent

04/25/2012 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – The Oklahoma State Senate today passed the “Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act,” a tax measure first proposed by Governor Mary Fallin in her February State of the State address. Fallin’s plan reduces the top income tax rate from 5.25% to 3.5%, simplifies the tax code by reducing the total number of tax brackets from seven to three, and eliminates many tax credits and tax exemptions. The plan also provides for the eventual elimination of the state income tax, with additional yearly reductions of .25% to the tax rate linked to a 5% rate of growth in state tax revenue collections.

“I am grateful to the Senate for passing the ‘Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act,’ as well as their continued focus on tax relief and reform,” Fallin said. “This is one of several tax cut bills that has now passed in both the House and Senate, and it is clear that a majority of our

“To lead effectively, an executive needs the ability to choose his or her advisors,” Fallin said. “This bill will help me as well as future governors to call on individuals with appropriate expertise to serve over the course of multiple-year terms. I am thankful to the Legislature for sending it to my desk, and happy to sign it into law.”

Cabinet members will still require Senate confirmation under the new law, which goes into effect on November 1, 2012.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Today Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin announced that the State of Oklahoma has reached an agreement with Public Service Company of Oklahoma (PSO) and the Environmental Protection Agency that settles compliance challenges with federal air quality rules relating to PSO's two coal-fired power plants at its Northeastern Station in Oologah, OK.

In May, the Attorney General's Office filed a lawsuit against the EPA to allow more time for Oklahoma stakeholders to craft a state solution.

The Oklahoma-based agreement, which has now been reached, permits PSO to comply with EPA rules, including the Regional Haze Rule and the Mercury and Air Toxics Rule, while simultaneously protecting Oklahoma consumers and ratepayers. Larson, 32, was among 18 women who recently completed the Women in Recovery program, an alternative to incarceration for nonviolent women in Tulsa County who have alcohol and drug addictions. It is the program's sixth graduating class.

One-hundred and sixty eight lives were lost in that terrible attack, including 19 small children. The horror, the brutality and the evil of the Murrah bombing can never be overstated.

“It was an attack that could have easily crippled our city, and left our people hopeless. It did not. Instead, the people of Oklahoma banded together – with the help of volunteers and well-wishers from across the nation and even the world – to overcome. We worked together; we comforted one another; and we rebuilt. Today we are a more prosperous city and a stronger people.

In that light, the Department of Commerce and my office, like many others in Oklahoma, have been monitoring the progress of American Airline’s restructuring under Chapter 11 of the Bankruptcy Code. While this process is difficult and painful, it is also necessary if American is to emerge a viable company and a strong competitor.

“Questions have risen recently about what the best outcome of the bankruptcy process may be for Oklahoma, including the possibility of a hostile takeover of the company. Fallin asked the legislature in her State of the State address earlier this year to pass such a resolution, saying the state of Oklahoma needs to send a message to Washington that out-of-control spending was hurting the economy and threatening the nation’s future.

“Washington’s reckless spending habits are leading this country off a fiscal cliff,” said Fallin. “It is wrong; it is irresponsible

Oklahoma offers a fine example of how a thriving energy industry coupled with pro-growth policies can lead to low unemployment and a strong economy. Energy exploration and production is an important part of our history and our current success, and it is my hope the president was able to learn something from our many industry experts during his time here.

“In his remarks today, President Obama said he supports an ‘all of the above’ energy strategy. As evidence of that support, he cites the Cushing pipeline, an important project being developed and paid for by TransCanada, a private sector corporation. In this case the

This project will help to bolster our energy industry and security for years to come.

“I am glad the president supports the construction of the pipeline connecting Cushing to the Gulf. Impeding the progress of something which is so obviously beneficial to both the economy and the energy security of the United States would have been nothing short of irresponsible.

Public officials find it difficult to lead when personal lifestyle is involved, including choices about smoking, exercise and diet. Yet such prevention initiatives remain important levers for reducing disease. That's why we should be especially proud of Oklahoma's "CEO," Gov. Mary Fallin, and her decision to prohibit tobacco use on state property. The CEO Roundtable on Cancer stands behind Fallin. Her action is an important step for improved health and a call for leadership nationwide to lower cancer rates.

How important? Government data on lung cancer place Oklahoma eighth nationwide in that form of cancer for men and fifth for women. This form of cancer is the highest cause of cancer-related death in Oklahoma. Fallin's action could also help Oklahoma understand that improved health comes from choices that stave off illness in the first place, whether that illness is cancer, obesity or Barcus currently serves as the vice chief judge of the Domestic Relations Division in Tulsa County District Court. He previously served as a family court referee in Tulsa County District Court.

“Judge Barcus has proven to be a fair and effective judge and a dedicated public servant,” Fallin said. “I know he’ll work to defend both the letter and spirit of the law and will do a great job as Tulsa County’s new district judge.”

Barcus previously spent several years in private law practice in the Tulsa area. He served on the Tulsa Public Schools Board of Education. Barcus serves on a variety of organizations supporting the arts, including the Board of Directors of the Oklahoma Arts Institute.

Fallin: Air Force Cuts Show Misplaced Priorities at the White House

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement in response to the news that the Air Force will eliminate hundreds of military and non-military personnel in Oklahoma, including the 600 men and women of Tinker Air Force Base’s 3rd Combat Communications Group, also called the Third Herd:

“The announced cuts to Oklahoma Air Force personnel are both disappointing and alarming. Oklahoma’s Air Force bases are not only important parts of their local communities; they play a vital role in our national defense. The decision to eliminate hundreds of military and civilian Air Force personnel will mean Oklahoma will lose jobs and the United States Air Force will be without quality units like the Third Herd.

“It is disturbing that President Obama is so eager to make billions of dollars in funding and personnel cuts to our military even while spending on entitlements and social programs continue to

Governor Fallin’s Agenda Moves Forward in Legislative Committees

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today thanked lawmakers for quickly acting on proposals outlined in her State of the State address and in her executive budget, presented at the start of the legislative session. Fallin had outlined proposals to cut the state income tax, modernize state government, increase energy efficiency in government, improve the state's bridges and highways, and provide better access to medical care in rural and underserved areas. She also proposed emergency funding measures in areas that include public safety, education and natural disaster relief. All of these proposals have now been heard and passed out of their respective legislative committees.

"Oklahomans want their elected officials to focus on legislation that will help to create jobs, improve their quality of life and reduce government waste," Fallin said. "I'm happy to say that's exactly what our lawmakers are

The Oklahoman: Oklahoma governor's income tax reduction plan wins House committee approval

BY MICHAEL MCNUTT, Oklahoman

Gov. Mary Fallin's personal income tax reduction plan cleared its first legislative hurdle Wednesday when a House committee voted to advance it to the full House for consideration.

But her proposal, which calls for cutting the top personal income tax rate by nearly half, has a tough road ahead as lawmakers struggle to eliminate economic tax credits, some of which are necessary for her plan to succeed.

The House of Representatives Appropriations and Budget Committee voted 9-8 to defeat an amendment by Rep. Don Armes, R-Lawton, to remove a tax credit for the state's wind industry from the measure, House Bill 3061. And the committee later voted not to pass HB 2876, which would have extended or imposed a two-year moratorium on 29 tax credits, which would have saved the state $29 million in the upcoming fiscal year and $37.3 million in the 2014 fiscal year.

Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act Advances in Committee

03/01/2012 08:30 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – The "Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act," the tax cut plan outlined by Governor Mary Fallin in her State of the State address, was heard today in the House Appropriations Committee where it passed by a margin of 11-6. The bill is sponsored by House Speaker Kris Steele and Senate President Pro Tempore Brian Bingman. The bill now heads to the House floor before it can make its way to the Senate.

"The Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act is a game-changer for the state," Fallin said. "This reform measure will provide immediate tax relief to a large majority of Oklahoma families while delivering a far more attractive tax climate for businesses deciding where to locate. By passing this legislation, we'll be leaving more money in the pockets of working Oklahomans while helping to attract new and better jobs. This will deliver the boldest, most significant tax reduction in state history, and Oklahoma's long and colorful aviation history is part of the fabric of the state, and its economic contributions have sustained it through wars and recessions, Gov. Mary Fallin said Tuesday.

Speaking at the 2012 Partnership Conference - sponsored by the Oklahoma Airport Operators Association, the Oklahoma Aeronautics Commission and the Federal Aviation Administration Southwest Region Airports Division - Fallin said the Oklahoma aviation industry precedes statehood.

The governor spoke before 350 people at the Renaissance Tulsa Hotel and Convention Center.

While Oklahoma's oil boom was beginning with the drilling of the Ida E. Glenn No. 1 well 10 miles south of Tulsa in 1905, Clyde Cessna began flying his first airplane, Fallin said.

A deal has been reached to provide $92.5 million of emergency funding for this fiscal year that, among other things, would pay for $5,000 National Board Certified teacher bonuses, hold a trooper academy and reimburse local communities and counties for disaster assistance, legislative budget leaders announced Tuesday.

The money comes from increased state revenue collections this fiscal year. Collections are coming in about 10 percent higher than estimates for the 2012 fiscal year, which ends July 1. The money for the supplemental appropriations is from increased collections.

“Thanks to our growing economy, the state now has the money to address obligations we are committed to,” said House Appropriations and Budget Committee Chairman Earl Sears, R-Bartlesville.

Governor Fallin Applauds TransCanada Decision to Begin Construction of Southern Portion of Keystone

02/27/2012 12:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today applauded TransCanada’s decision to proceed with the construction of an oil pipeline from Cushing, Oklahoma to the U.S. Gulf Coast. The pipeline represents the southern leg of the Keystone XL Pipeline project that would transport oil from Canada and various U.S. markets to the Gulf Coast.

“Connecting Cushing to oil markets in the Gulf Coast will provide both an immediate economic jolt to the state of Oklahoma as well as a long term boost to our energy sector,” Fallin said. “Construction of the pipeline alone will create 1,200 jobs, while increasing access to the important markets along the coast will help energy producers for many years to come. This is an important, positive step forward for Oklahoma, and my thanks go out to TransCanada for its leadership on this issue.”

Governor Says Additional $47.2 Million Should Go Toward Tax Cuts

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today welcomed the news of an additional expenditure authority of $47.2 million in state revenue as presented to the Board of Equalization. The latest estimates set total appropriations authority at $6,579,752,153, which is $47.2 million more than the previous estimate from December. Additionally, the board announced that, according to the revised estimates for the current fiscal year, $319 million likely will be deposited into the state’s Rainy Day Fund.

“The increase in certified revenue is another positive signal that Oklahoma’s economy continues to bounce back. It’s also great evidence that our pro-growth, pro-business reforms and fiscally sound policy decisions are paying off,” Fallin said.

Service members leaving the military have a new resource in Oklahoma to help them with employment in the civilian world.

The Oklahoma National Guard is developing the Employment Coordination Program, which will connect service members and veterans of the wars in Iraq and Afghanistan to employment opportunities in the state.

With more than 3,000 members of the Oklahoma National Guard in various stages of demobilization from their deployments to Afghanistan and Kuwait, Guard officials say the program will be important in providing them with stability.

About a third of the soldiers returning will not have jobs when they get back to the state, said Maj. Geoff Legler, spokesman for the Oklahoma National Guard.

Lt. Col. Warren Griffis started as the director of the Employment Coordination Program in January and has since worked to build the program from the ground up, all in preparation for the Soldiers were addressed by Gov. Mary Fallin and Maj. Gen. Myles Deering, adjutant general for Oklahoma, at the Norman Armed Forces Reserve Center before embracing waiting and friends and families.

“Welcome home,” said Fallin, to the gathered citizen-soldiers. “It’s so great to have you home — there is no place like home. I think you can agree with me today: There’s no place like Oklahoma.”

The soldiers arrived at the Norman Armed Forces Reserve Center mid-morning Friday. They are the second group of soldiers from the Oklahoma National Guard's 45th Infantry Brigade Combat Team to demobilize after their deployment to Afghanistan and Kuwait.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today applauded the board of the Oklahoma Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust (TSET) for approving funds to create a fitness center at the state Capitol. Board members approved a $38,500 proposal submitted by the governor, which includes a $20,000 contribution from the Oklahoma Hospital Association. The funds will largely be used for exercise equipment.

Fallin had proposed creating a Capitol Fitness Center in her annual State of the State address.

"Obesity is one of the major drags on the state's health indicators, and we're trying to lead by example at the Capitol by working out and improving our physical fitness," Fallin said. "My thanks go out to the board members of TSET as well as the Oklahoma Hospital Association for their support of this effort."

EDMOND — Gov. Mary Fallin defined her governorship on Feb. 6 and cemented her legacy as a leader. In her State of the State address, Fallin laid out her vision for how Oklahoma can grow or lead in several important areas.

Nowhere in that speech did she throw down the “my way or the highway” gauntlet to legislators or the people of Oklahoma. No, she truly offered a multi-point plan that offers opportunity for discussion that could bear rich fruit for our state.

Her speech was thoughtful, insightful and at times provocative. But nowhere was she more bold than in outlining her income tax elimination plan.

In offering an income tax reform plan that could take up to 15 years to fully implement, Fallin was careful to find ways to protect the state’s poorest and neediest citizens. She’s found a responsible way of approaching this necessary reform while putting everyone on notice that changes are

Gov. Mary Fallin made a push to legislators to support her personal income tax reduction and elimination proposal as revenue reports released Tuesday showed the state set an all-time monthly record for state sales tax collections.

"It is great news that sales tax receipts reached an all-time high and our economy is continuing to grow," Fallin said. "I am encouraging legislators to see this as an opportunity, not to grow government or to spend more on government bureaucracy, but to pursue a bold plan to cut taxes and allow Oklahomans to keep more of their hard-earned money."

Oklahomans went on a buying spree in late December and early January as sales tax collections for the state's general revenue fund, the main source of state funding, totaled $165 million in January, the report shows.

OKLAHOMA CITY — Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin is honoring an Okarche-based company for converting its 2,000th vehicle to run on compressed natural gas.

Fallin held a ceremony Monday at the state Capitol to recognize OEM Systems, Inc., which converts gasoline or diesel-powered vehicles to run instead on compressed natural gas. The 2000th conversion was a state vehicle used by the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture.

Fallin is one of a bipartisan group of governors from 10 states that have signed a memorandum promising to invest in natural gas vehicles in state automobile fleets. Its aim is to encourage U.S. automakers to produce natural gas fleet vehicles that will also meet public demand.

According to the U.S. Energy Information Administration, Oklahoma was the third-largest gas producing state in 2009 behind Texas and Wyoming.

If you’re the kind of person that likes to compare political debate to warfare, you’ll appreciate that one way to understand the differences between the federal and the Oklahoma legislative processes is to compare them to how World War I and the Civil War were fought.

The federal legislative process, with its year-round schedule and well-paid and -staffed full-time legislators, is like World War I: a never-ending and steady diet of constant engagement – political trench warfare.

Our state’s legislative process is more similar to the Civil War; each legislative session is like a particular campaign like those that culminated in the battles of Gettysburg or Antietam. The side that seizes the best ground is likely to prevail in battle. In our system, the governor, in her State of the State address and the submission of her proposed budget, has the first

NORMAN — Oklahoma has long had college students who leave campus before finishing their degrees. They leave to take jobs in order to support families, they get behind in studies and don't see a way out, or they just need a break. Additionally, some students are pushed into university studies before they are ready.

Dropping out is acceptable by many. It's a mindset many Oklahomans have that having some college hours is nearly as good as finishing a degree. Many entry-level jobs advertise "some college" preferred.

Oklahoma's Chancellor of Higher Education Glen Johnson and Gov. Mary Fallin hope to boost the number of college degrees handed out over the next 12 years.

Mr. Johnson and Mrs. Fallin want to count an additional 20,400 college graduates and certificates. Recruitment of students seems to be the easy part, as Oklahoma has enjoyed record enrollments over the past few years.

Tulsa World: Rich or poor, both pay similar tax rate in Oklahoma

By WAYNE GREENE, World Senior Writer

Oklahoma's income tax system is flat on top and oddly graduated underneath.

On Monday, Gov. Mary Fallin announced a plan to cut the state's income tax system dramatically. Starting next year, Fallin wants the state's top income tax rate to be 3.5 percent. That rate would kick in on net income over $70,000 a year for a married couple filing jointly.

The current comparable top rate is 5.25 percent, which kicks on net income over $15,000 a year.

That's correct: The state's top tax bracket - and there are six other lower tax brackets - kicks in at $15,000 a year, about $80 a year less than the gross earning of someone working full time at the U.S. minimum wage.

If you file individually, the top rate kicks in on net income above $8,700 a year, more than $2,400 a year below the gross income of the poverty level.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement concerning Attorney General Scott Pruitt’s lawsuit to stop the construction of the Kialegee Tribal Town casino in Broken Arrow:

“While I share the concern that many Broken Arrow residents have over the construction of a casino in their community, my office is unfortunately left with no legal way of blocking the project. The same does not hold true for our attorney general, however, and I am happy that Attorney General Pruitt has decided to take this matter to court. I certainly do not support the construction of a gaming facility which local residents do not want and which may have a negative impact on the community.

“Moving forward, it is my hope that state law can be adjusted to give the office of the governor greater flexibility in approving or denying gaming compacts of this nature.”

OKLAHOMA CITY - Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin laid out a long list of challenges facing Oklahomans during her State of the State speech Monday, but also praised how well the state has done considering the economic crisis faced by the entire country.

In her address to kick off the 2012 legislative session, Fallin proposed deep cuts to the income tax that would take effect on January 1, 2013. Her plan would cost the state hundreds of millions of dollars in revenue each year, and it's not clear exactly how Fallin would offset the lost revenue.

She says she plans to pay for the tax cut by eliminating "tax loopholes, carve-outs and other exceptions," but the governor's office has not released details on which exemptions would be eliminated.

"Today, I'm asking our lawmakers to join me in an ambitious and exciting undertaking, the passage of a bold tax reform plan that will represent the most significant tax cut in state history," Fallin said during her second State of the State address delivered to a joint legislative session assembled in the House chamber.

The Oklahoma Tax Reduction and Simplification Act would cut income taxes in all brackets, simplify the tax code and move toward elimination of the income tax, the governor said.

The plan would reduce the current tax system from seven brackets to three beginning in 2013, she said.

Couples making $30,000 or less annually would not pay state income taxes, Fallin said. Those making $30,000 to $70,000 would pay a 2.25 percent tax

BY MICHAEL MCNUTT, The Oklahoman

Tobacco products at all state-owned and leased properties and in state-owned and leased buildings and vehicles will be banned effective July 1 under an executive order signed Monday by Gov. Mary Fallin.

The announcement drew applause, but groans were heard seconds later in the House of Representatives chamber when she announced the ban would mean the closing of a smoking room in the state Capitol for lawmakers and employees.

“You’re going to like this one, too,” she joked as she announced the smoking room, in the Capitol’s basement, would be remodeled — at no expense to the state — into a small fitness center. The state is seeking a grant from the Tobacco Settlement Endowment Trust and the Oklahoma Hospital Association has agreed to match it, Fallin said.

The governor announced she had signed the tobacco ban during her State of the State speech to lawmakers, which kicks

OKLAHOMA CITY – Republican Gov. Mary Fallin called on state lawmakers to flatten the state’s income tax rate, restore funding for teachers’ health benefits, refill the state disaster fund and provide more money for road and bridge improvements during her State of the State speech Monday.

Fallin also issued a second terse response to leaders of the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations. She said she would request more money to hire the very best counsel to defend the state against the tribes’ joint lawsuit over the Sardis Lake Reservoir.

Previously, the governor sent a joint letter to both tribal leaders calling on them to withdraw their lawsuit.

“As you know, the Choctaw and Chickasaw nations have sued the state of Oklahoma concerning who owns the water in 22 counties,” the governor said Monday. “We continue to hope this issue can be settled through mediation, without

Gov. Mary Fallin goes large with this year's State of the State speech

The Oklahoman

SMALL things dominated Barack Obama's State of the Union speech. In her 2012 State of the State speech, Gov. Mary Fallin went large.

Eliminating the personal income tax is as large as a governor can get, yet that's what Fallin focused on Monday. She said Obama's oversized government could learn some things from her smaller government:

"In Oklahoma, we could teach Washington a lesson or two about fiscal policy, the role of government and the proper size of government."

Now Fallin must teach us how to pay for services if we don't tax incomes. Her plan cuts the seven tax brackets to just three and exempts most lower-income taxpayers entirely. This neuters the argument that tax cutting does nothing for the poor.

Tax cuts, and reform of the tax code, are expected to dominate the 2012 legislative session.

Wall Street Journal: The Heartland Tax Rebellion

02/07/2012 08:30 AM CST

Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin is starting to feel surrounded. On her state's southern border, Texas has no income tax. Now two of its other neighbors, Missouri and Kansas, are considering plans to cut and eventually abolish their income taxes. "Oklahoma doesn't want to end up an income-tax sandwich," she quips.

On Monday she announced her new tax plan, which calls for lowering the state income-tax rate to 3.5% next year from 5.25%, and an ambition to phase out the income tax over 10 years. "We're going to have the most pro-growth tax system in the region," she says.

She's going to have competition. In Kansas, Republican Governor Sam Brownback is also proposing to cut income taxes this year to 4.9% from 6.45%, offset by a slight increase in the sales tax rate and a broadening of the tax base. He also wants a 10-year phase out. In Missouri, a voter initiative that is expected to qualify for the November ballot would abolish

Gov. Mary Fallin said Thursday she will unveil plans next week to simplify the state's tax code and cut personal income tax for most Oklahomans.

The governor said her proposal, which she has been working on for five months, would not require an increase in other taxes. She hopes to make up for the lost revenue mostly by closing loopholes in the tax code, eliminating various tax credits and making state government more efficient.

“I believe this will be one of the boldest tax reform plans we've seen in our state's history. It will give us one of the lowest income tax rates in our nation. It will be a significant tax reduction for a majority of all Oklahomans, and I think it will be a game-changing moment for our state,” she said.

The plan would provide tax relief for the 2013 tax year and calls for the gradual reduction of the personal income tax through economic growth triggers,

"I believe this will be one of the boldest tax reform plans we have seen in our state's history," Fallin said. "It will give us one of the lowest income tax rates in our nation."

More details are expected to be released Monday when the governor gives her State of the State address to a joint session of the Legislature.

Several measures dealing with taxes have already been filed for consideration by lawmakers when they return to the Capitol for the second session of the 53rd Legislature.

Fallin said her proposal will be funded largely by eliminating several tax credits. She is expected to release a specific list Monday.

Governor Mary Fallin Responds to American Airlines Business and Restructuring Plans

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement addressing American’s announcement regarding future business and restructuring plans:

“American’s announcement today represents a commitment to continuing a large presence in Oklahoma and, specifically, Tulsa. Their communications with employees and with my office indicate they are working to preserve as many jobs as possible, and that Tulsa will not be left out of American’s restructuring plans. All of this is good news.

“Unfortunately, however, the state will necessarily lose some jobs during the restructuring process. Any time men and women in Oklahoma lose their jobs it is difficult for those individuals, their families and their communities. It is also difficult for me. Today is no exception. My heart goes out to those who now face an uncertain future.

Tulsa World: State Chamber hears Fallin tout strength of state's economy

BY WAYNE GREENE, Tulsa World Senior Writer

Oklahoma's economy is growing, and the rest of the nation is starting to pay attention, Gov. Mary Fallin told business leaders Tuesday night.

"Oklahoma is serious about creating the best business climate possible," she said at the State Chamber of Oklahoma's Legislative Kickoff Reception at Southern Hills Country Club.

The event - meant to reinvigorate local business involvement in the State Chamber - drew legislative leaders, business executives and elected officials from around the state.

Fallin said she recently returned from a trip to New York City, where she took the good news about Oklahoma's economy to bond rating agencies that will determine the state's cost of borrowing money.

Since the beginning of last year, the state has seen a net increase of 38,400 jobs, the second-fastest rate of job growth in the nation, Fallin said.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement following President Barack Obama’s State of the Union Address:

“Unfortunately, it is American families and businesses that are bearing the brunt of these failed policies and stale ideas. Almost two million more Americans are out of work today than when the president was sworn in. Even when his administration is given a golden opportunity to aid in significant economic growth – as was the case with the proposed Keystone XL pipeline and its 20,000 shovel-ready jobs – it is squandered. Oklahoma leaders, headed by Gov. Mary Fallin, plan to go to New York on Thursday to seek to improve our state’s bond ratings.

We certainly hope they are successful.

It appears they will have plenty of ammunition in seeking the boost in ratings.

Right now, Standard and Poor's and Fitch Ratings have Oklahoma at their second-highest rating, AA+.

Moody's Investor Services has Oklahoma at its third-highest rating, AA2. The highest rating for all three is AAA.

The officials going along with Fallin, including Treasurer Ken Miller, Office of State Finance Director Preston Doerflinger and State Bond Adviser Jim Joseph, will point out plenty of positives Oklahoma has going for it.

For one, the state has a balanced budget.

Also, they will point out Oklahoma's impressive growth in state revenues in recent months, low unemployment and the $500 million

The proposed Keystone XL pipeline is expected to create about 1,200 construction jobs in Oklahoma if the Obama administration approves the project, the man responsible for the $7 billion project said Tuesday.

Keystone Pipelines Vice President Robert Jones said the pipeline is an important piece of infrastructure that will link the large crude oil basin in northern Alberta with U.S. refining centers on the Gulf Coast.

Jones said pipeline could even move oil from the storage hub at Cushing, where a supply glut has reduced the price for oil produced in this region.

“We've offered an expansion of the system before it's even put in the ground to move more oil out of Oklahoma,” said Jones, who spoke Tuesday to the Rotary Club in Oklahoma City.

The Oklahoman: Oklahoma's economy continues to outpace projections

State general fund collections recorded double-digit growth in December and for the first six months of this fiscal year, according to reports released Tuesday.

All major categories of revenue collections were up by double digits in December, except sales taxes, according to revenue reports issued by the state finance office.

Sales tax collections produced $153.5 million, or 5.7 percent more than a year ago, but came in below estimates. Sales tax collections for December came in 0.4 percent below projections. The sales tax collections covered actual and estimated sales for the last 15 days of November and the first 15 days of December.

“More Oklahomans had jobs this Christmas than in 2010,” state Finance Director Preston Doerflinger said. “But the sales tax figures for the first part of the holiday shopping period indicate our citizens were prudent in their spending, just as we need to

Oklahoma Now - A Year to Remember: Looking Back at 2011

By Governor Mary Fallin

The New Year has arrived, and it promises to be an exciting period for Oklahoma. With an economy on the rebound and another promising legislative session on the horizon, there are plenty of reasons to have high expectations for 2012. In next month’s column, I plan on outlining some of our plans for the state and the various ways my administration is working to bring more and better jobs to Oklahoma.

This month, however, I'd like to take a look back at 2011, an historic and important year. In many ways it was a challenging year as well. The state continues to recover from the loss of nearly 80,000 jobs due to the last recession. And, of course, we faced a $500 million budget shortfall that required agencies to tighten their belts, make sacrifices and find ways to operate more efficiently and effectively.

I'm proud to say the state rose to the challenge. To stimulate the economy, we passed a

Governor Mary Fallin Comments on Certified Revenue Figures

12/20/2011 12:15 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today issued the following statement on the Oklahoma Board of Equalization certified revenue figures. The governor will have $6.5 billion to craft her FY 2013 budget, an increase of $120.3 million over the previous year.

“The numbers certified by the Board of Equalization today indicate that tax revenues are increasing as Oklahoma’s economy continues its rebound from the national recession. That’s the good news. The loss of one time funding sources, however, means the state is currently facing an estimated budget shortfall of $150 million. While that number may change, the bottom line is that next year’s budget will be flat at best. Moving into 2013, state agencies should redouble their modernization and efficiency efforts to ensure they are maximizing the value of their appropriated funds

12/16/2011 11:15 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin applauded an action taken today by the Oklahoma State and Education Employees Group Insurance Board (OSEEGIB) that will save taxpayer dollars and reduce prescription drug costs for thousands of consumers in Oklahoma. The plan was originally submitted by the Pharmacy Providers of Oklahoma (PPOk) as a way to reduce prescription drug costs while retaining a level playing field between local independent pharmacies, chains and mail service pharmacies. Total savings are estimated at $13.1 million per year for the state, as well as a total of $19.8 million in total savings for the 163,000 thousand prescription drug consumers currently enrolled in Health Choice plans.

Under the new proposal, Oklahoma pharmacists will offer deeper discounts on all drugs for Health Choice Plans resulting in savings to the plan and the members, which include many teachers, state employees, retirees, including all

Governor Mary Fallin, Superintendent Barresi Statements on RTT-ELC

12/16/2011 10:30 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin and State Superintendent Janet Barresi today issued the following statements in reaction to a White House announcement that Oklahoma will not be included on the list of Race to the Top – Early Learning Challenge grant winners.

Gov. Mary Fallin:

“Oklahoma delivered a strong application, and my thanks go out to State Superintendent Janet Barresi, Education Secretary Phyllis Hudecki and the many other individuals who worked to put it together. It is disappointing the Obama Administration has once again chosen not to name us as a Race to the Top grant winner.

“Despite today’s news, Oklahoma remains a leader in the field of early learning. With over 70 percent of our four year olds participating in some form of early learning program, it will continue to be important to develop and improve our pre-kindergarten services. Today’s announcement does

Governor Mary Fallin Responds to EPA Smog Reduction Plan

12/15/2011 03:00 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today responded to an Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) plan to reduce regional haze and control emissions at three Oklahoma power plants. The EPA posted the plan to their website after rejecting a proposal to reduce regional haze put forward by the state of Oklahoma earlier this year.

“It is frustrating and disappointing that the EPA continues to move forward with a federal plan that will raise costs for ratepayers and utility companies, leave less money in the pockets of Oklahomans and push our economy in the wrong direction. The EPA’s plan could drive utility rates significantly higher in the next five years, something that many citizens cannot afford, especially during a recession.

“Fortunately, there continue to be signs that the federal government may be open to a regional haze reduction plan proposed by the state of Oklahoma and designed to address the environmental, health and economic

State Banking Board Votes to Lower Assessment Rates for 2012

12/14/2011 03:45 PM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced the Oklahoma State Banking Board has voted to lower the assessment rates paid by all state-chartered banks in Oklahoma. The Board took action at its Nov. 30 meeting in response to the increased costs that Oklahoma banks are incurring as a result of federal regulatory changes.

The assessment rates were lowered 22 percent for a bank’s first $100 million of assets. The rates take effect Dec. 31, 2011. The Board reasoned this reduction in state regulatory assessments may help offset federal regulatory costs that are increasing, as well as help community banks devote more capital to community-based lending.

“What Washington doesn’t seem to understand is that burdensome overregulation can stifle economic growth and job creation. The state Banking Board’s move will free up Oklahoma’s community banks to devote more capital to community-based lending to

Oklahoma Now: The Oklahoma First Energy Plan

By Governor Mary Fallin

Oklahoma has always been a leader in producing American energy. With one of the lowest unemployment rates in the nation, we’re also doing a great job of creating American jobs. At a time when many other states are experiencing high unemployment, Oklahoma is continuing to see strong economic growth, and the energy sector has been an extremely important part of that success story.

Oil and natural gas companies support over 300,000 jobs in the state. In many ways, the industry represents Oklahoma’s economic backbone. Renewable energy, like wind power, is also growing quickly, employing over 3,000 Oklahomans and adding $13 million a year in property tax and land lease payments. Washington should take note: Oklahoma is seeing economic stimulus, job

The Republican governors said states can help lure businesses by reducing workers' compensation obligations, making regulations less onerous and limiting damages from civil lawsuits.

Barbour said curbing lawsuit damages was key to Mississippi.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement on the U.S. Supreme Court's decision to hear arguments on the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act (PPACA), President Obama's controversial health care law:

"President Obama's health care law is unconstitutional and unaffordable. Not only will it limit choice and undermine the quality of American health care, it stands to cost the state of Oklahoma about half a billion dollars in the process.

“Our citizens have already passed a constitutional amendment blocking its implementation in Oklahoma, and it’s clear that a majority of states are similarly opposed to the mandates, new taxes, and out-of-control spending proposed in the law.

“The Supreme Court should strike down the president’s health care reform as unconstitutional as soon as possible. The uncertainty surrounding the

Oklahoma Now: New Transportation Plan Vital for Economic Success & Job Growth in Oklahoma

By Governor Mary Fallin

I have said many times before that my first priority as governor is to bring more and better jobs to the state of Oklahoma. To that end, I've worked with other lawmakers to develop and implement a series of job creating initiatives that will help to deliver the kind of business-friendly environment that leads to private sector job growth.

This week, I am announcing the next step in that pro-jobs agenda: the "Bridge Improvement and Turnpike Modernization Plan."

Having safe, modern and easily traveled roads and bridges is important for commuters, for commerce and for job creation. As my secretary of transportation once told me, businesses don't want to locate on a dirt road. They want a modern transportation infrastructure servicing their needs.

Unfortunately, the state of Oklahoma's bridges have long been an impediment to economic growth. For years, Oklahoma

10/03/2011 01:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced a new initiative to target and fix all 706 of the Oklahoma state highway system’s currently identified structurally deficient bridges by 2019. Oklahoma has frequently and notoriously topped national “bad bridge” lists. Fallin’s new “Bridge Improvement and Turnpike Modernization Plan” would, upon completion, bring the number of currently known structurally deficient highway bridges to less than one percent and make Oklahoma a national leader in that area.

Her plan also calls for projects that would significantly reduce congestion on the Creek and Kilpatrick turnpikes. These improvements would be made without increasing taxes or tolls. Fallin said the historic number of upcoming infrastructure improvements will benefit safety, commerce and travel in Oklahoma for decades to come.

Tulsa World: Google plugs in data center in Pryor

09/30/2011 09:30 AM CDT

PRYOR - With the ceremonial connection of a data cable into an input jack, the Google data center in Pryor officially powered up for business Thursday afternoon.

The event, attended by Gov. Mary Fallin, Google Senior Director of Operations Joe Kava and Secretary of Commerce Dave Lopez, marked the culmination of the Internet giant's long-planned investment in the area.

Fallin praised the Mountain View, Calif., company for choosing Oklahoma as one of its sites for growth.

"There are other states you could have invested in," she said. "So on behalf of the state, I want to say thank you for having the confidence to invest in Oklahoma."

The 130,000-square-foot data center, which will power a variety of Google's services, now employs 106, but that number should grow, Kava said.

"There's been a much greater demand for our services," he said.

Although the data center just opened,

KRMG: Circuits now singing at Google server farm near Pryor

By Paul Crockett, KRMG

TULSA, Okla. — Google's server farm at the Mid-America Industrial Park just south of Pryor is up and running. Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin was on hand for the official connection that was made just before 4:00 p.m. on Thursday afternoon.

The facility had been scheduled to go online a few years ago but that was put on hold when the economy took a nose dive in 2008. 106 people are now employed at the facility and more may be hired as the search engine giant expands.

Google's Joe Kava, the senior director of data center and construction for the search engine giant, says the center at Pryor is very efficient. "This data center is operating at about half of the overall power of a typical data center this size."

Kava says the Pryor site had the right mix of people, power and property for one of their data centers. "So everything came together and ultimately

An invitation so exclusive, guests won a lottery to get past the front gate.

"You cannot board the bus to come here without it," said Tulsa resident Cathy Butler.

Google hired more than 100 people to work here. Inside the building are servers. Lots of them. Working around the clock to power Google's massive search engine.

"Right now you probably notice that those search results are pretty fast. The reason that we get those really quick search results is that we have data centers near our users," said Joe Kava of

Forbes: Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin Shows Washington How It's Done

09/22/2011 10:45 AM CDT

On a trip across the country to recruit new business to Oklahoma, January-appointed Governor Mary Fallin stopped by Forbes to speak with me last month. Well, more like hobbled. In a flaming-red power suit she limped on two crutches to the boardroom table, still recovering from a July hip surgery. “It’s a little embarrassing,” she confided. But she’s set big goals on her agenda, and a little limp won’t stop her.

Fallin, the first female governor of Oklahoma, started her career in the private sector and got so fed up with government policies, decided to enter politics in 1990. She later spent 12 years as a lieutenant governor before being elected to the U.S. Congress in 2006. With her buddy Michele Bachmann, she was one of just two Republican women elected that term. Today, she’s one of only six female governors in the U.S.

In her first year, Fallin boasts that Oklahoma’s budget is balanced, its unemployment rate is

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement regarding the 10th anniversary of the 9/11 attacks:

“Oklahoma experienced tragic loss during our own terrorism attack on the Murrah building and those memories were stirred on September 11. Just as our fellow Americans came to help our state after the April 19th attack, hundreds of Oklahoma firefighters, emergency responders, volunteers and military personnel went to provide comfort and support for our friends in New York and Washington. Tulsa World: FlightSafety soars

08/24/2011 11:30 AM CDT

BROKEN ARROW - Rick Armstrong, vice president of simulation for FlightSafety International, believes the company has a "value proposition" that is attractive to airlines, the military and corporate aviation departments facing high fuel prices in a stagnant economy.

It's cheaper - and more forgiving - to train in a full-motion flight simulator, Armstrong said, than in an aircraft burning high-price jet fuel.

Armstrong told more than 500 people at the grand opening Tuesday of FlightSafety's $42 million, 375,000-square-foot flight simulator manufacturing facility in Broken Arrow that he expects a strong return on the company's value proposition.

"We look forward to an exciting future here," he said. "We have 684 employees. We have gone from 240,000 square feet (in four Broken Arrow facilities) to 375,000 square feet. There is room for growth here. Our goal is to be the market leader and to Flight Safety International produces aircraft simulators and also trains about 75,000 commercial, military and civilian pilots each year in its 43 centers worldwide. It moved to Broken Arrow in 1987 and employs about 670 people. City and state leaders fought to keep Flight Safety International in Broken Arrow after it outgrew its facilities and considered moving operations out of state. The city offered the company $6 million in incentives and a 99-year lease to keep it in Broken Arrow.

Fallin said Flight Safety is key to the aerospace industry, which she called one of Oklahoma's most

Says Better Conditions Make Changes in Statewide Burn Ban Likely

OKLAHOMA CITY – Speaking at a press conference addressing the state’s response to the ongoing drought and heat wave, Governor Mary Fallin today said that one of her priorities in the next legislative session would be to replenish the State Emergency Fund. The fund reimburses counties, municipalities, rural electric cooperatives, rural water districts and other entities for infrastructure damage sustained under a presidential disaster declaration.

While the emergency fund was created to lessen the fiscal impact of tornadoes, hurricanes, wild fires and other natural disasters, the state is several years behind in its payments. The current balance stands at $944.00, with outstanding obligations totaling more than $36 million.

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released a statement supporting the ruling of a federal appeals court in Atlanta that the “individual mandate” contained within the federal health care law was unconstitutional. The federal panel said in the majority opinion, “This economic mandate represents a wholly novel and potentially unbounded assertion of congressional authority.”

Fallin released the following statement:

“I am pleased that yet another federal court has agreed that the ‘individual mandate’ contained within the president’s health care law is unconstitutional,” Fallin said. “Oklahomans have made it clear the federal government under no circumstance should be allowed to force citizens to purchase health insurance. As this case moves through the federal court system, I look forward to continued validation that the ‘individual mandate’ is

Governor Fallin Expands Burn Ban to all 77 Counties

08/03/2011 02:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today expanded the ban on outdoor burning to all of Oklahoma’s 77 counties. The Executive Proclamation expands the 45-county burn ban that was put in place on July 14, as the extreme to excessive drought conditions continue to worsen.

“We have just experienced the hottest July on record,” Fallin said. “The predictions of unrelenting extreme heat with no relief in sight make the statewide burn ban necessary.”

Oklahoma Forestry Services, a division of the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture, Food and Forestry, report increased fire activity across the state. Firefighter fatigue is a growing concern.

Gas and charcoal grilling is allowed provided that it is over a nonflammable surface and at least five feet from flammable vegetation. Unlawful activities under the ban include campfires, bonfires, fireworks and setting fire to trash, grass, woods or other materials outdoors. For a

Telling the Oklahoma Story

It is often said by Oklahomans that our state is the country’s “best kept secret.” With our great people, our low cost of living, beautiful landscape and abundance of natural resources, Oklahoma is a wonderful place to call home. Our economy is strong as well, and in recent months, I’ve worked with our legislature to pass legislation that will make Oklahoma even more prosperous, building a business climate that’s ripe for job growth and investment.

As the numbers show, Oklahoma and its economy are continuing to grow at a steady pace, even while the national economy continues to struggle. While the national unemployment rate hovers near 10 percent, Oklahoma’s has fallen to just 5.3 percent, a 28-month low. And while federal legislators struggle to restore anything resembling fiscal sanity to the nation’s capitol, Oklahoma not only has a balanced budget, but is filling its reserve fund. Last month alone saw $219 million added to

Talking Points Memo: Oklahoma Wants To Reserve Airspace For Drones

07/29/2011 10:00 AM CDT

A new air corridor to be reserved exclusively for unmanned aerial drones could turn Oklahoma into the prime drone development region of the United States.

Oklahoma state officials are currently pushing for the corridor, which would stretch for approximately 80 miles between Fort Sill and the town of Clinton, to be approved by the Federal Aviation Administration.

If approved, the air corridor would be the first civil airspace in the country where unmanned aircraft could be flown without prior FAA permission.

Oklahoma is already one of the nation's primary centers for drone development; the proposed air corridor is expected to spur business development and encourage relocation of existing projects.

Oklahoma State University's Multispectral Laboratory, which develops UAV technologies and maintains close ties to defense contractors, already has an agreement with the military to fly drone aircraft over portions of Fort Sill's

Pryor Daily Times: Farm Bureau applauds governor's drought relief effort

07/28/2011 03:45 PM CDT

The state's largest farm organization supports Gov. Mary Fallin's executive order allowing truck drivers to haul larger loads of hay.

"This will make it possible for livestock producers to get hay to hungry livestock quicker," said Mike Spradling, president of the Oklahoma Farm Bureau.

The drought has destroyed local hay fields, forcing producers to seek hay supplies from areas less affected by the drought.

Current rules require hay loads not to exceed 11 feet in width. The executive order increases the limit to 12 feet. A standard large round hay bale is six feet wide. The rule effectively doubles the number of bales a truck can carry without an additional permit.

"We applaud the governor for recognizing this need and for showing compassion during a stressful time for livestock producers," Spradling said.

Department of Agriculture Issues Disaster Declaration in 74 Oklahoma Counties

07/27/2011 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – The United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) today issued a Secretarial disaster declaration in 69 Oklahoma counties and five contiguous counties. The declaration came in response to a June 10 request by Governor Mary Fallin, who asked the USDA to issue a disaster declaration in order to help farmers hit by drought and wildfires.

Seventy-four Oklahoma counties are currently covered under the USDA declaration. Nowata, Craig and Ottawa counties are not.

According to the USDA, a Secretarial disaster designation makes farmers in designated counties eligible to be considered for federal assistance from the Farm Service Agency (FSA). That assistance includes FSA emergency loans and the Supplemental Revenue Assistance Payments (SURE) Program. Farmers in designated counties have 8 months from the date of a Secretarial disaster declaration to apply for emergency loan assistance. Farmers interested in requesting additional Obesity rates have grown faster in Oklahoma than any other state in the nation over the last 15 years. According to a report on adult obesity just released by the Trust for America's Health and the Robert Wood Johnson Foundation, Oklahoma ranks seventh worst in adult obesity, third worst in physical inactivity among adults, and Oklahoma has the lowest level of fruit and vegetable intake among all states.

As governor, one of my goals is to raise awareness about the seriousness of obesity, poor nutrition and physical inactivity in Oklahoma. The result of poor nutrition, inactivity, and obesity contributes to high blood pressure, high cholesterol, diabetes, heart disease, stroke, arthritis and cancer. These are critical health indicators that have dire consequences for our families and even our economy. Preventable illnesses related to obesity and unhealthy behaviors are causing

Dow Jones Newswires: Oklahoma Seeks More Work From AMR's New Airbus Fleet

07/25/2011 10:15 AM CDT

Oklahoma has started pitching American Airlines to expand its maintenance base in Tulsa to accommodate a planned new fleet of Airbus aircraft, its governor said.

The European manufacturer's breakthrough order with American Airlines is expected to trigger a contest among states eager to capture the maintenance and repair work for a fleet of hundreds of Airbus A320-family planes.

Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin said in an interview that she had discussed the issue "briefly" with American Airlines officials earlier this week, just ahead of the carrier's disclosure of a record-breaking order for 460 planes--with the potential for 465 more. More than half of the new jets will be made by Airbus, a unit of European Aeronautic Defence & Space Co. (EADSY, EAD.FR); the rest will be made by Boeing Co. (BA).

American, a unit of AMR Corp. (AMR), focuses heavy maintenance for its existing all-Boeing fleet at the Tulsa facility, which employs

Governor Mary Fallin Expresses Disappointment with Congress After FAA Reauthorization Extension Goes

07/22/2011 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today expressed disappointment with Congress for failing to pass the Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) reauthorization extension. The FAA's current authorization will expire tonight at midnight.

The failure to pass a reauthorization extension could endanger funding for the FAA Airport Improvement program, FAA facilities and equipment as well as the NextGen Air Transportation System. In Oklahoma, over $54 million in construction projects at Will Rogers Airport, Tulsa International Airport and general aviation airports across the state could be in jeopardy. Additionally, approximately 130 employees at the Mike Monroney Aeronautical Center in Oklahoma City are expected to be furloughed indefinitely without pay.

"It is essential that Congress act quickly to pass an FAA reauthorization bill," Fallin said

Governor Fallin Eases Truck Rules to Save Livestock

07/22/2011 11:15 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Oklahoma Governor Mary Fallin today signed an executive order allowing haulers of hay to carry larger loads in their trucks. The order comes in light of the ongoing drought, which has left some farmers without access to hay for livestock.

Current rules restrict haulers of hay to dimensions of 11 feet in width. Governor Fallin’s executive order increases those limits to 12 feet. Because a standard hay bale is six feet in width, this change doubles the amount of hay bales capable of being hauled per truck without a permit.

Additionally, for those vehicles transporting hay to livestock, the executive order temporarily suspends the requirement for an oversized vehicle permit within these limits.

“The historical drought we are now facing is having a serious impact on our entire state, and farmers are among the hardest hit,” Fallin said. “Many farmers are experiencing shortages of hay, leaving their

Fallin pitches Okla. to Chicago-based businesses

07/22/2011 09:30 AM CDT

Gov. Mary Fallin is in Chicago pitching Oklahoma's business climate and workforce in an attempt to lure Illinois-based companies to the Sooner State.

Fallin planned to host a reception Thursday night with several “business prospects” and national location scouts to tout recent changes in Oklahoma law that she described as pro-business.

Fallin said she already met with several Illinois-based businesses that have a presence in Oklahoma, including insurance giant Blue Cross/Blue Shield, transportation company Navistar, and Acciona, which manufactures wind turbines.

Fallin says the purpose of the trip is to both thank the companies for the investments they've already made in Oklahoma and to encourage them to consider the state for future expansion.

She says she's touting changes to Oklahoma's workers' compensation and civil justice laws.

Fallin: State needs game changer

07/19/2011 08:45 AM CDT

TULSA – Oklahoma must come up with exotic industries to become the go-to place for business, Gov. Mary Fallin said.

Fallin spoke to a sold-out audience of 760 people from the Tulsa regional business community during the Tulsa Metro Chamber's annual State of the State address Monday at the Hyatt Regency Hotel in downtown Tulsa.

"All states have about the same things they offer business to come to their state," she said. "They all have tax incentives or use higher education or cash-back offers."

In order to stand out, the state needs to create a game changer – something that is distinctive to Oklahoma and no other state, Fallin said.

One exotic business niche that the state should target is the unmanned aerial vehicle sector, she said.

"One such area today is the unmanned aerial systems program," Fallin said. "Aerospace remains a key industry for our state, with more

Governor Fallin Asks Oklahomans to Pray for Rain this Sunday

07/14/2011 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – In light of the sustained drought, Governor Mary Fallin today asked all Oklahomans to set aside time this Sunday, July 17, to pray for rain.

Dry conditions have helped contribute to over 140 wildfires this year, resulting in the loss of dozens of homes. Earlier today, Fallin signed an executive order issuing a burn ban in 45 counties.

Low-levels of rain fall, which match rainfall deficit records dating back to the Dust Bowl, have also lead to significant hardships in the agricultural sector.

“I encourage Oklahomans of all faiths to join me this Sunday in offering their prayers for rain,” Fallin said. “For the safety of our firefighters and our communities and the well-being of our crops and livestock, this state needs the current drought to come to an end. The power of prayer is a wonderful thing, and I would ask every Oklahoman to look to a greater power this weekend and ask for rain.”

Governor Fallin Issues Ban on Outdoor Burning

07/14/2011 01:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – As drought conditions continue to worsen across Oklahoma, Governor Mary Fallin has issued an Executive Proclamation banning outdoor burning for much of the state. Oklahoma Forestry Services, a division of the Oklahoma Department of Agriculture, Food and Forestry, recommended the ban based upon an analysis of fire activity, wildland fuel conditions and the predicted continued drought as criteria for recommending the ban.

The Governor’s Burn Ban covers 45 counties in western and south-central Oklahoma (see map). County Commissioner Burn Bans remain in effect in some counties not covered by the Governor’s proclamation. Extreme fire conditions are increasing with the extraordinary drought. With no significant rainfall predicted, expansion of the number of counties with burning restrictions may be necessary in the future.

“The number of wildfires we have had over the last few months is extremely tough on our state

AP: $219 million going into Oklahoma's reserve fund

07/12/2011 09:00 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Oklahoma's finance director said Monday the state will make a $219 million deposit into the depleted constitutional Rainy Day reserve fund whose current balance totals just over two bucks, thanks to strong revenue collections in June and the recently completed 2011 fiscal year.

Office of State Finance Director Preston Doerflinger said collections by the state's general revenue fund last month were almost 16 percent more than in June 2010 and that revenue for the fiscal year that ended June 30 was 10.5 percent more than the previous year.

"We're getting economic traction in all areas, including some where it appears stagnation has set in for the national economy," Doerflinger said. He said recent declines in Oklahoma's unemployment rate coincide with strong income tax collections, both individual and corporate.

Oklahoma's jobless rate fell to a 28-month low of 5.3 percent in May compared to a national

Oklahoma Now: Good transportation network vital to state's economy and job creation

07/04/2011 07:00 AM CDT

I recently participated in the centennial celebration of the Oklahoma Department of Transportation. It was a wonderful tribute, and a great time for all of us to remember how important transportation has been, and still is, to this state.

As Oklahoma has grown and flourished over the years, so too has our transportation infrastructure. Imagine the gravel and dirt roads of 100 years ago and note where we are today with a modern, comprehensive statewide transportation network of highways, waterways and railways. Having that modern infrastructure encourages trade and commerce, improves our quality of life, and creates jobs.

The history of Oklahoma transportation is an impressive one. In the agency's early days, the first highway commissioner, Sidney Suggs of Ardmore, proposed six highways, which were eventually built and are still in use today. However, at that time, the highway department didn't have enough money to pay for blue prints let alone

Governor Fallin Joins Other Governors in Releasing Medicaid Reform Principles

06/13/2011 02:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today joined 28 other GOP governors in announcing seven guiding principles for reforming Medicaid.

The principles will serve as a framework as governors continue working with Congress as it considers how to reform Medicaid.

“Given the flexibility to craft their own solutions, states can meet the health care challenges of their citizens better than a one-size-fits-all plan handed down from Washington,” Fallin said. “These principles will serve as a guide as we work with the federal government to improve the delivery of Medicaid.”

The seven principles are:

1. States and territories are best able to make decisions about the design of their healthcare systems based on the respective needs, culture and values of each state.

KJRH: Webco buys Hissom land, creates jobs in Sand Springs

06/08/2011 09:00 AM CDT

SAND SPRINGS,Okla. - Land that's been abandoned for years in Sand Springs is undergoing a transformation and new jobs will come with it.

The old Hissom Memorial Center off of Highway 51 will soon be home to Webco Industries, a tubing manufacturer and supplier.

Since the Hissom Memorial Center closed years ago, dozens of buildings have sat empty, slowly falling apart.

"It was kind of a blight. I drive by this everyday going home," said Mary Eubanks, Sand Springs Chamber of Commerce president. "And you'd think, 'oh why can we not do something with that?' It's a shame the buildings are falling down."

But now, crews are busy demolishing buildings and getting ready for new construction.

"So it's really great to see that something nice is going to be here. When people drive by, instead of going, 'oh my gosh, they're going to go, oh look at that, how neat is that,'"

Journal Record: Summit - Unmanned aerial vehicle sector shows much promise for growth

06/08/2011 09:00 AM CDT

TULSA – Oklahoma stands on the cusp of a dynamic new economic platform: development of unmanned aerial vehicles.

The aerospace sector already provides the state an impressive economic engine, as Gov. Mary Fallin and Secretary of Commerce and Tourism Dave Lopez said Tuesday during the Oklahoma Aerospace Alliance’s 2011 Oklahoma Aerospace Summit and Expo. The sector’s 500 related companies generate $12 billion of industrial output annually, their 150,000 workers drawing a $5 billion payroll.

But the startup UAV sector – also known as unmanned aerial systems, or UAS – already promises to make a sizable addition. In just five years this cottage industry, rising from obscurity to global prominence through the U.S. military’s Middle East war applications, has already generated $323 million in orders through Ponca City’s Oklahoma State University Multispectral Laboratories.

Gov. Mary Fallin made the announcement Tuesday during the 10th Oklahoma Aerospace Summit and Expo at the Tulsa Convention Center.

PrimeWIN is an incentive program designed to match Oklahoma subcontractors with federal prime contractors, said Dave Lopez, Oklahoma secretary of commerce and tourism.

"We wanted to get more federal government project work into the state so Oklahoma companies can bring more jobs and investment into the state," Fallin said.

The program incentivizes prime contractors – no matter where they are located – to subcontract work in Oklahoma, Lopez said.

"The prime contractor receives the incentive and the Oklahoma businesses get the work and are able to

06/06/2011 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – One of Oklahoma’s fastest-emerging industries, unmanned aerial systems, continues its trajectory with new government partnerships and a potential new airspace and corridor for testing.

Meanwhile, the human support on the ground is solidifying, with an advisory council to be appointed by Gov. Mary Fallin, and a new state chapter of the Association for Unmanned Vehicle Systems International.

Dr. Stephen McKeever, executive director of the University Multispectral Laboratories, will head the council, which will include 10 to 15 people from the public and private sectors. He said Oklahoma’s assets for unmanned aerial vehicles continue to grow in parallel to a resurgence of aerospace interest among the next generation.

One of the newest developments is an agreement in which Oklahoma entities are researching and developing unmanned aerial vehicles that would test aircraft electronic landing systems for the Federal

Changes Will End Continued Defiance by Rogue Districts

OKLAHOMA CITY – Gov. Mary Fallin has signed legislation modifying the Lindsey Nicole Henry Scholarships for Students with Disabilities Program Act to ensure children with special needs receive scholarships in a prompt manner.

House Bill 1744 by State Rep. Jason Nelson (R-Oklahoma City) and State Sen. Patrick Anderson (R-Enid) changes the law so school districts will no longer administer the program. Instead, the Department of Education will administer it.

“Last year, several school districts failed to provide scholarships to eligible special needs students, flagrantly violating the law,” said Nelson. “Thanks to the modifications in this bill, the State Department of Education will administer the program rather than local school districts. This will provide consistency and certainty for students and parents who choose to participate in the

The Oklahoman: Bill will improve Oklahoma workers' comp system

05/22/2011 09:45 AM CDT

THE last significant changes to Oklahoma's workers' compensation system, in 2005, followed noisy legislative debate that included the lieutenant governor at one point taking control of the Senate in an effort to get a bill passed. A bill wound up being produced at the eleventh hour and lawmakers had to extend the session before approving it.

There were no such histrionics this session. Instead, after much behind-the-scenes work, state Rep. Dan Sullivan and state Sen. Anthony Sykes presented Senate Bill 878 last week and the 220-page bill quickly gained easy passage in the House and Senate.

“The reason you don't see that outcry is we did make an attempt to bring representatives of all the groups together,” said Sullivan, R-Tulsa. “It lengthens the process, but that's not all bad. If there's one thing I've learned in my time here, it's be careful of making decisions in a vacuum.”

The Oklahoman: Oklahoma Legislature pushed pro-business measures

Promises to pass legislation intended to improve Oklahoma's business climate that had been sought for decades by the state's business community will define this year's session, the first time ever a Republican governor and a GOP-controlled Legislature were in power at the same time.

House Speaker Kris Steele, R-Shawnee, said passage of pro-business measures should help improve the state's economy.

“We succeeded in creating an environment where businesses can succeed and families can prosper,” Steele said. Senate President Pro Tem Brian Bingman, R-Sapulpa, said: “Certainly we had a pro-business agenda, but I think all the reforms that we've enacted affect everybody. Workers' compensation reform — that's good for big business, that's good for small business, that's good for the injured worker.”

The Oklahoman: Fallin enjoys legislative successes

05/22/2011 09:45 AM CDT

Gov. Mary Fallin, helped by a strong supporting cast, fared well in her first stint dealing with the Legislature as the state's chief executive.

As lieutenant governor, she had watched from the sidelines for 12 years. She saw Republican Gov. Frank Keating struggle with a Democratic Legislature, then saw Democratic Gov. Brad Henry work with a growing number of Republicans to reboot the state economy, only to see it wither under the national recession.

After being elected to Congress from central Oklahoma's 5th Congressional District in 2006, Fallin won election last year on the theme of getting legislation passed to develop a better business climate for the state, attracting new jobs and helping existing businesses.

Many of the proposals she made in February, during her first State of the State address, were embraced and passed before lawmakers ended their work Friday.

A controversy earlier this year involving emails at the state Department of Education provided a glimpse into just how badly Oklahoma’s information technology system needs to be reworked. It's clear, however, that moving the system into the 21st century promises to be a long slog indeed.

Shortly after the new state schools superintendent took office in January, it was discovered that emails by former Superintendent Sandy Garrett had been permanently deleted before she left office. An employee said Garrett told her to delete the account, something Garrett disputed. Not up for dispute was that the agency uses an email program the state's chief information officer, Alex Pettit, called "terribly archaic."

The program also was different from most other state agencies, which is no great surprise. In her state of the state speech, Gov. Mary Fallin said some state institutions were "outdated eight-track bureaucracies in an iPod

EDMOND — Gov. Mary Fallin has signed a variety of public safety bills, including one related to rights of child abuse victims, a measure about who can use deadly force and legislation which outlaws abortion of a fetus capable of feeling pain.

House Bill 1888, the "Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act," by state Rep. Pam Peterson, R-Tulsa, was approved by the governor on April 20. It was passed by the full House 94-2 and by the full Senate 25-20.

Rep. Randy Grau, R-Edmond, and Rep. Marian Cooksey, R-Edmond, were among the House co-authors sponsoring the bill. Sen. Clark Jolley, R-Edmond, was the principal Senate author.

On the House floor, Peterson said the bill makes it illegal to perform an abortion on an unborn child capable of feeling pain, more specifically, an unborn child who is 20 weeks old or older.

When she explained the bill, Peterson sent a 4-D ultrasound image of a 20-week unborn child to House members

The Oklahoman: Gov. Fallin signs eminent domain law to protect landowners from wind farm threat

05/16/2011 10:00 AM CDT

Gov. Mary Fallin has signed into law an eminent domain measure that protects rural landowners from the threat of companies looking for locations to build wind turbines.

The bill's author, Sen. Ron Justice, of Chickasha, said wind power provides a tremendous boost to the state's economy, but he said it is important to protect landowners' rights.

The law was heralded by a northwest Oklahoma property owners group.

“The Southern Great Plains Property Rights Coalition supports any legislation which will help landowners protect their property now and for future generations,” the group said Friday. “We feel this is a step in the right direction since the use of eminent domain for profit is becoming a hot topic.”

The law prohibits use of the power of eminent domain for the siting or erection of wind turbines on private land. It says landowners have the right to decide whether they want turbines on their

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law legislation creating the Supplemental Hospital Offset Payment Program, or SHOPP. The program, proposed under HB 1381, allows for a provider assessment to support Oklahoma hospitals. The bill protects patients by specifically prohibiting hospitals from passing on the cost of the assessment to them.

“SHOPP is an important piece of legislation that provides necessary support and funding for Oklahoma’s hospitals,” Fallin said. “Getting this legislation signed into law will be a big boost for our medical community and will help to improve access to quality medical care for all of our citizens. HB 1381 is an especially important bill for rural Oklahoma, where some hospitals might be forced to close without this additional support.”

Craig Jones, president of the Oklahoma Hospital Association, said HB 1381 would help to improve access to hospital services.

Governor Fallin Signs Legislation Suspending Art in Public Places Act

05/11/2011 03:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law House Bill 1665, a measure that suspends the Art in Public Places Act. In the last three fiscal years, the act set aside a total of $3.4 million to be spent on public art alone as part of various public building projects, according to the Oklahoma Historical Society.

“While we all appreciate the aesthetic and cultural value art can bring to public building projects, it’s not appropriate to set aside millions of dollars for public art when the state is facing a $500 million budget deficit,” Fallin said. “By suspending the Art in Public Places Act, we will be able to save tax dollars by reducing the overall costs of public building projects for the immediate future.”

HB 1665 suspends the requirements of the Art in Public Places Act for state agencies during fiscal years 2012, 2013 and 2014.

Governor Fallin Signs Landmark Corrections Reform Legislation in to Law

05/11/2011 02:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Fallin today signed into law landmark corrections reform legislation. The governor was joined by House Speaker Kris Steele, Department of Corrections Director Justin Jones and other state leaders. House Bill 2131, authored by Steele, is designed to relieve widespread fiscal and social strains caused by Oklahoma's nation-leading incarceration rates.

"This bill is about being smart on crime as well as tough on crime," Fallin said. "The reforms we are signing into law will not only save taxpayer dollars, they'll help to address some of the social problems that continue to drag down the quality of life in our otherwise great state. By pursuing responsible community sentencing options that allow non-violent offenders – many of whom have substance abuse problems – to receive treatment and safely reintegrate into their communities, we can help to break a cycle of poverty, drug abuse and crime that has

Governor Fallin, Legislative Leaders Announce Budget Deal

05/10/2011 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY -- Governor Mary Fallin, House Speaker Kris Steele and Senate Pro Tempore Brian Bingman today announced a budget agreement laying out a fiscally responsible plan to balance the state budget without raising taxes. Addressing a $500 million shortfall, today's budget deal relies primarily on targeted budget cuts.

As part of the budget agreement, both the speaker and the pro tem have committed to passing key government modernization bills, including legislation to consolidate several state agencies under the Office of State Finance and legislation to consolidate the state's Internet Technology services. Both items include projected savings and were included as part of Fallin's legislative agenda.

Under the proposed FY 2012 budget, cuts to state agencies vary, generally ranging from 1 to 9 percent. Both the governor and legislative leaders made shielding core government functions a priority. For that reason, cuts to the

Reforms Will Reduce Pension Systems' Unfunded Liability by Over $5 billion

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed several key pieces of pension reform legislation into law at a public bill signing with state leaders. The bills aim to provide a boost to the fiscal solvency of the state's public employee pension systems, which are currently troubled with $16 billion in unfunded liability.

"Pension reform is about creating a sustainable future for our state budget and our state retirement systems," Fallin said. "We can't keep allowing these systems to go deeper and deeper into debt without serious consequences. By beginning the reform process today, we are helping to ensure that we don't one day face a crisis scenario where the state is simply unable to deliver on the benefits we've promised our retired workers."

Tulsa World: Gov. Fallin signs education reform bills in to law

05/05/2011 09:15 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY - Gov. Mary Fallin signed two education reform measures into law Wednesday.

Senate Bill 346 ends "social promotion" for students after the third grade.

It requires third-graders to be proficient in reading before moving on to the fourth grade.

House Bill 1456 sets a grading system for schools based on an A to F scale.

"It is a very exciting day for Oklahoma, a very exciting day for Oklahoma school children and an exciting day for improving education in the state of Oklahoma," Fallin said at a bill-signing ceremony in the governor's large conference room.

HB 1456 will increase accountability in education and empower parents, Fallin said.

"With that system in place, parents will now have the ability to quickly and easily be able to evaluate the quality of education that our children are receiving," she said.

"I believe it will also encourage teachers

Public schools no longer will be able to promote third-grade students who cannot read at appropriate levels under a bill signed into law Wednesday.

"It has been said that in the first through the third grade a child learns to read, but the fourth grade on, a child reads to learn," said Gov. Mary Fallin, who signed Senate Bill 346 and another education measure into law during a bill-signing ceremony.

"If our children are not able to read at grade- appropriate levels, they can't learn the math, the science, the social studies as they continue to go through the education system.

"We're doing a great disservice to our children, a great disservice to our parents, a great disservice to our workforce when our children are passed from grade to grade without the ability to read at grade- appropriate levels."

SB 346 takes effect in late August.

Fallin also signed House Bill 1456, which will

Governor Fallin Signs Key Education Reform Measures into Law

05/04/2011 03:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Fallin signed two important education reform measures into law today at a public bill-signing ceremony with education leaders and elected officials.

Fallin signed Senate Bill 346, ending social promotion for students after the third grade. SB 346 requires students in the third grade to demonstrate proficiency in reading before moving on to fourth grade. The bill was a key component of Fallin's education reform agenda and mentioned in her State of the State address.

"Studies have shown that from kindergarten through the third grade, a child 'learns to read', but from fourth grade on, they 'read to learn,'" said Fallin. "This bill makes sure that every fourth grader has developed the reading proficiency they need to absorb new academic material and succeed in class. Sending an illiterate child on to higher grade levels is setting that child up for failure, and I commend the

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today announced appointments to the Oklahoma Horse Racing Commission (OHRC). The governor selected Phillip Kirk, Melvin Bollenbach, Joe Lucas and Ran Leonard. Each will serve a six-year term and Senate confirmation is required for each appointment.

"These individuals have years of experience in equestrianism and the horse-racing industry," Fallin said. "I know they will use their expertise to hold the commission and the industry to an extremely high standard."

Philip Kirk of Tulsa is a part-time charter pilot. Before retiring, he served as owner and chairman at Resonant Machines, a highway contracting firm in Tulsa, senior vice president at The Management Compensation Group, a national consulting firm in Los Angeles, and at the Reading & Bates Corporation, an international offshore drilling company in Tulsa. He also is a former race horse owner and

Oklahoma Now - 'Strong Finish: More Reforms Needed in Last Month of Legislative Session'

05/02/2011 01:00 PM CDT

May is the last month of the 2011 legislative session, and I'm happy to say this legislative year is on track to be a productive one. Several key reforms already having been signed into law and more are on the way.

We have delivered, for instance, on landmark lawsuit reform that will help to create more jobs in Oklahoma by establishing a better business climate and placing a cap of $350,000 on non-economic damages.

Where education is concerned, the legislature has worked with me to pass bills making it easier to let go ineffective teachers, ending a lengthy and costly legal appeals process known as “trial de novo” that had previously made it nearly impossible to fire even the most ineffective instructors.

We have also passed important pro-life measures, prohibiting abortions after 20 weeks (when an unborn child begins to feel pain) and ensuring that those citizens who purchase private health insurance are not unknowingly or

Governor Fallin Statement on bin Laden Death

05/02/2011 10:45 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin released the following statement today on the successful elimination of Osama bin Laden by U.S. armed forces:

“Our military men and women and our intelligence officers have once again made the world a safer place. This is a great victory in the War on Terror and a defeat for Al Qaeda and all those who use terror as a weapon. It is also, I hope, a cause for relief and for closure among the many men and women who lost loved ones in the September 11th attacks. I would encourage all Oklahomans and Americans to keep the victims of 9/11 and their families in our thoughts and prayers as we celebrate this important victory for the United States and all freedom-loving people.”

Tulsa World: Fallin accomplishing legislative goals

05/01/2011 09:45 AM CDT

After a little more than 100 days in office, Gov. Mary Fallin's legislative agenda is doing very nicely, thank you.

"At the beginning of the legislative session, I outlined an agenda that will create a better business climate, bring more and better jobs to Oklahoma and reform government to make it smaller and more efficient," Fallin said in a statement to the Tulsa World. "I'm happy to say that our lawmakers have responded by sending a number of priority bills to my desk and continuing to work on other important agenda items.

"By all accounts, it looks like 2011 will be a productive and important legislative session."

True enough.

Fallin's State of the State address set out 13 identifiable legislative initiatives. While she hasn't cleared the tables on all 13, and she has had to accept some compromises, a little more than midway through the legislative year she finds herself in a position most

Bill to Create Ardmore Branch Campus Lacks Sustainable, Long Term Funding Plan

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today vetoed House Bill 1227, which would convert the Ardmore Higher Education Center into a branch campus of Southeastern Oklahoma State University. While Fallin said she supports expanding opportunities for higher education in Ardmore, she said that the plan to create a new branch campus needed more thorough vetting and a more comprehensive plan for sustainable funding.

“Supporting access to higher education is an important goal and something that I am committed to doing,” said Fallin. “Unfortunately, House Bill 1227, while well-intentioned, is flawed. The bill’s intent is to create and maintain a new college campus with funds from local government and private contributions; however, it is doubtful that such a campus can be sustained in the long run without significant state support. In other words, the OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law House Bill 1593, authored by Representative Steve Martin, Senator Cliff Aldridge and Senator Clark Jolley. HB 1593 repeals the Oklahoma Municipal Employee Collective Bargaining Act, a law requiring collective bargaining for non-uniformed employees in cities with at least 35,000 residents.

“House Bill 1593 will help to control costs for Oklahoma’s cities and save taxpayer dollars,” said Fallin. “I’m happy to sign it into law.”

Oklahoma City, Tulsa, Norman and Muskogee – all of which had collective bargaining agreements prior to the 2004 passage of the Oklahoma Municipal Employee Collective Bargaining Act – will not be affected by the new law. HB 1593 goes into effect on November 1, 2011.

Governor Fallin Requests Public Assistance for Atoka County

04/29/2011 01:45 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today requested that the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA) grant public assistance for Atoka County, hard hit by the April 14th Tushka tornado. If approved, the designation would deliver federal funding to assist municipalities, counties and rural electric cooperatives with infrastructure repairs, debris removal and costs associated with responding to the storm. The aid would also help Tushka School District with their recovery efforts.

“It is my hope to secure federal public assistance in order to make the recovery process as seamless as possible,” said Fallin. “In the meantime, we continue to hold the victims of this tragedy in our thoughts and prayers.”

A preliminary damage survey identified more than $10 million in uninsured infrastructure losses in Atoka County due to the tornado. Other counties can be added to the request as additional damages are

Governor Fallin Declares State of Emergency Due to Tornadoes, Flooding

04/27/2011 05:00 PM CDT

The counties included in the declaration are: Adair, Cherokee, Delaware, Haskell, LeFlore, McCurtain, Muskogee, Okfuskee, Ottawa, Pittsburg and Sequoyah.

Since Thursday, Oklahoma has experienced at least three tornadoes and widespread flooding. East central areas of the state have received 10 to 13 inches of rain. Some homes and businesses sustained damage as well as many roads and bridges.

Further damage assessments are expected to begin next week.

Commissioners of the Land Office appoint Harry Birdwell as Secretary

04/26/2011 04:45 PM CDT

Governor Mary Fallin and the Commissioners of the Land Office today appointed Harry W. Birdwell as the new Secretary of the Land Office.

“Harry Birdwell brings strengths to the agency including a strong background in education, rural development, investments and economic development” Fallin said.

Birdwell’s background includes work the Oklahoma State University, The Rural Electric Co-op and the Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce.

Talking about the opportunity, Birdwell said,” It is a great time to link the Commissioners of the Land Office to the perspectives of the newly elected state leadership to continue the trend of accountability and to think outside the box to maximize the yield from the state’s land resources and to leverage and stimulate economic development”.

The Commissioners of the Land Office have, to date, provided just under $113 million dollars to schools and colleges across the state.

Governor Fallin Signs Law Expanding Self-Defense Rights

04/25/2011 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law House Bill 1439, authored by Representative Steven Vaughan and Senator David Myers. HB 1439 expands the right to use deadly force when in fear of imminent peril of death or great bodily harm. Current law allows individuals to use deadly force only in their homes; HB 1439 expands that right to include their place of business. The bill takes on November 1.

“Oklahomans have the right to feel safe and defend themselves in their homes and now, with the passage of this law, in their workplaces as well. This measure represents a victory for law-abiding citizens and gun owners and a defeat for the criminals who would threaten them,” Fallin said.

Governor Fallin Signs Two Pro-Life Bills into Law

04/20/2011 05:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed two pieces of pro-life legislation into law at a ceremony attended by pro-life legislators and advocates.

House Bill 1888, authored by Representative Pam Peterson and Senator Clark Jolley, creates the Pain-Capable Unborn Child Protection Act, which bans abortions after 20 weeks of pregnancy. Scientific studies have shown that at 20 weeks an unborn child can feel pain. The bill exempts situations in which the life of the mother is at risk or when the mother faces serious risk of substantial and irreversible physical impairment.

Senate Bill 547, authored by Senator Anthony Sykes and Representative Dennis Johnson, ensures standard health insurance policies sold in Oklahoma or sold through a state health insurance exchange do not include elective abortion coverage. The bill prevents Oklahomans from unwillingly subsidizing abortion coverage simply by purchasing health insurance. Under SB 547, those who want

Governor Fallin Statement on Oklahoma City Bombing Anniversary

04/19/2011 02:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement on the 16th anniversary of the Oklahoma City bombing:

“Sixteen years ago, 168 victims tragically lost their lives in an unimaginable and shocking act of terrorism. Today, we remember the fallen, give comfort to the families left behind and to the survivors. We also again express our appreciation for the rescue workers and first responders who spent countless hours at the scene.

“In the days and weeks after the bombing, the world saw on display our resilient nature as we comforted one another and began the difficult healing process. That community spirit, known as the ‘Oklahoma Standard,’ continues to showcase the generosity, resiliency and loving nature of our citizens even during the most difficult of times.”

04/18/2011 04:00 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today requested a federal disaster declaration for Atoka County in the wake of the deadly tornado that swept through the town of Tushka on April 14. The designation would provide federal assistance to individuals and businesses in the tornado-ravaged area.

Two confirmed deaths and 43 injuries are attributed to the Tushka tornado. According to preliminary damage assessments conducted this weekend, the storm damaged 237 homes and businesses in Atoka County. Of those, 149 were destroyed, 47 sustained major damage and 33 had minor damage.

“The deadly storm led to the tragic loss of two lives and our prayers continue to be with the families who lost loved ones,” Fallin said. “The storm also severely damaged or destroyed the homes of many residents and this disaster declaration is the first step in helping residents get back on their feet.”

Governor Fallin Signs Funeral Protest Restrictions into Law

04/18/2011 03:15 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law Senate Bill 406, a measure adding further restrictions to funeral protests.

The bill, by Sen. Josh Brecheen of Coalgate and Rep. Dustin Roberts of Durant, would prohibit protests within two hours before or after a funeral. SB 406 also bans such protests from within 1,000 feet of a funeral. Previous law allowed protests to occur within 500 feet.

“Protesting a funeral for political purposes is an abhorrent and disgusting practice,” Fallin said. “While such distasteful protests have been ruled constitutionally protected and cannot be legally prohibited, this legislation will help protect grieving families from people who are looking to exploit their suffering.”

Working together, leaders were able to address concerns expressed by some by adding specific safeguards into the legislation that will prevent the implementation of a federal health care exchange while creating an Oklahoma-based health insurance network. The Health Insurance Private Enterprise Network, based on a concept by the conservative Heritage Foundation and legislation passed by the Oklahoma Legislature in 2009, will increase access to affordable, private, portable health insurance plans through a free market-based network that offers choice and competition to consumers. The network will be governed by a board consisting of a majority of members from the private sector and chaired by the Insurance

“This legislation is an important step in bringing state oil and gas laws up to date with innovations needed to keep Oklahoma’s oil and gas industry competitive. House Bill 1909 will help Oklahoma to more effectively compete against other shale plays around the country, and help ensure that drilling dollars stay home in Oklahoma,” Fallin said. “Through the use of these technologies, our oil and gas producers can reach and produce even more of Oklahoma’s vast oil and natural gas resources in ways

Bill Allows Under-Performing Teachers to be Dismissed without Costly Legal Appeals Process

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed into law House Bill 1380, an education reform measure that makes it easier to dismiss underperforming teachers.

Under the current system, tenured teachers who are dismissed by local school boards can appeal that decision in district court. The appeals process, known as “trial de novo,” assures that dismissing underperforming teachers is both a lengthy and expensive process for schools. HB 1380 eliminates “trial de novo” and reforms the system to allow locally elected school boards to let teachers go without a long and costly appeals process.

Fallin said the bill is the first step in a series of education reform measures she is asking the legislature to send to her desk. Fallin had earlier identified the elimination of “trial de novo” as a priority in her

The bill also clarifies the superintendent’s authority to give advice and make recommendations to the state Board of Education on all matters pertaining to the policies and administration of the public school system. It also directs the state board to submit a budget, as prepared by the state superintendent, to the governor’s office.

Governor Fallin Signs Landmark Lawsuit Reform Bills Into Law

04/05/2011 04:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today signed a series of lawsuit reform measures into law, delivering on a key portion of her job-creation agenda.

“At the beginning of the year, I asked our Legislature to work with me to do everything we can to create more jobs and build a better environment for doing business in Oklahoma,” Fallin said. “Lawsuit reform was at the top of the list.”

"For too long, inflated legal fees have been an unnecessary cost-driver in the private sector and a burden on the medical community. As a result, we've seen businesses and doctors choose to locate in other states, depriving our citizens of good jobs, reducing access to medical care and driving up the costs for medical treatment.

“I’m thrilled to be able to sign into law measures which will directly address skyrocketing legal fees, protect our doctors, and help to bring more jobs and businesses into Oklahoma while

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today applauded the plan put forward by Republicans in the U.S. House of Representatives to convert the federal share of Medicaid spending into block grants for states. That plan is part of the “Roadmap to Prosperity” budget proposal unveiled earlier today. Fallin also praised the GOP’s commitment to fiscal discipline and debt reduction. Fallin also released the following statement:

“In addition to offering a serious commitment to fiscal responsibility and debt reduction, House Republicans should be applauded for introducing a plan that shifts policy decisions away from the federal government and closer to the people. Specifically, I’m extremely pleased to see the new GOP budget proposes eliminating the one-size-fits-all approach to Medicaid spending and replaces it with a block grant approach. Block grants will allow states more flexibility in meeting the individual needs of their citizens

“The severe winter storms caused widespread damage and cost local communities millions of dollars,” Fallin said. “This major disaster declaration will allow local and state governments to seek help with eligible infrastructure repair costs.”

Additional counties may be added to the public assistance disaster request as more damage assessments are completed.

Bill limiting lawsuits advances to governor

04/05/2011 10:15 AM CDT

A bill that would cap the pain and suffering damages that could be awarded in civil lawsuits is headed to Gov. Mary Fallin.

After more than two hours of debate, the Senate on Monday approved House Bill 2128 by House Speaker Kris Steele, R-Shawnee, and Sen. Anthony Sykes, R-Moore. Amendments to the measure were not heard.

Lawyers, injured people and doctors filled the gallery to watch the debate. Doctors wore white lab coats, while some critics of the measure donned hospital gowns to represent injured victims.

The measure passed by a vote of 30-14.

Fallin campaigned on supporting lawsuit reform.

The measure does not cap what are called economic damages paid to cover lost wages, future earnings and medical bills. Noneconomic damages, or pain and suffering, would be capped at $350,000 with some exceptions for reckless disregard for the rights of others, gross negligence, fraud, and intentional or malicious

Gov. Mary Fallin on Monday signed House Bill 1008, which will remove the aerospace incentives from a list of nearly 30 tax credits that legislators last year suspended. Lawmakers put it on a two-year moratorium to help balance this year's state budget.

The measure takes effect July 1.

Fallin said the measure is needed to encourage growth in the state's aerospace industry. The credits can be claimed only after companies have hired new engineers; the creation of new jobs is a requirement to claim the credit.

"The aerospace industry is one of our top industries in our state," Fallin said. "Having this aerospace engineering tax credit will go a long ways in not only helping us retain jobs but certainly to be more attractive to new jobs coming to the state of Oklahoma."

Fallin holds bill signing for aerospace measure

04/05/2011 10:15 AM CDT

New Republican Gov. Mary Fallin signed a bill on Monday designed to lure more aerospace companies to Oklahoma by offering tax credits for salaries paid to qualified engineers.

Flanked by lawmakers and aerospace industry officials, Fallin signed the House bill during her first public bill signing ceremony as governor. The measure, which is projected to cost the state nearly $6 million in its first year, allows companies to be reimbursed up to 10 percent of the salary paid to qualified engineers for up to five years if the engineer graduated from a university in Oklahoma. The reimbursement is 5 percent if the engineer graduated from a school outside of the state.

The measure also provides a tax credit for 50 percent of the tuition cost of an employee who attends a qualified engineering program at a public institution in Oklahoma.

Oklahoma Now - School Spirit: Raising the Bar in Education

By Governor Mary Fallin

In my State of the State address this February, I told lawmakers that nothing is more important to the future of our state and our long-term prosperity than improving student achievement. To see that improvement, I've outlined a comprehensive series of reforms to increase accountability and transparency in education, get more money into the classroom where it can do the most good, and raise the bar for students and teachers.

Among the legislative items I am hoping to see signed into law are bills to:

- Empower the state superintendent so that she has the ability to truly run the Department of Education: Voters elected Superintendent Janet Barresi to implement the reform agenda she outlined during her campaign. She – not the unelected Board of Education – should have the power to run her own department.
- End “trial de novo:” Under our

Both measures now proceed to the Senate.

“I applaud the Senate Education Committee for working to approve both of these important bills and I encourage the Legislature to get them to my desk as soon as possible. Governor Fallin Issues Statement on Anniversary of Federal Health Care Law Passage

03/23/2011 09:15 AM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued the following statement today regarding the one year anniversary of the passage of the federal health care law. While in Congress, Fallin voted against the bill.

She supports the national effort to repeal and replace the law with legislation as well as the legal effort to have the bill struck down by the U.S. Supreme Court. Oklahoma is one of the many states that filed a legal challenge to the federal law.

Fallin’s statement:

“A year ago today, President Obama signed into law one of the most ill-conceived pieces of legislation to have ever come from Washington, D.C.: the Patient Protection and Affordable Care Act. ‘ObamaCare,’ as it has come to be known, is both an assault on our constitutional liberties and a burden on our already struggling

Oklahoma veterans plan to make honor flights

03/22/2011 10:00 AM CDT

Gilbert “Choc” Charleston and Robert Heatley, who rolled through Europe in tanks during World War II, will be flying together in May to see the National World War II Memorial for the first time.

Charleston and Heatley, both 87, will be making the trip thanks to Oklahoma Honor Flights, a privately funded effort to fly World War II service members and other veterans to Washington, D.C., to visit national monuments and memorials dedicated to their service.

The group organized two flights last year and plans to have two more flights this year.

Efforts are under way to raise money to pay for a third flight. Each flight costs about $100,000 to send about 100 veterans and 60 volunteer assistants on the one-day, round-trip flight.

Charleston, who drove a U.S. Army tank in France, Luxembourg, Belgium and Germany, said he will be making the trip in May to honor the men in his company. Of 127 members, only 15 remain living.

Piedmont Mayor Mike Fina, who is vice president of the Mayors Council of Oklahoma, said his group especially liked the governor's message.

“We've been trying to get elected officials to take that step for years, to have that level of partnership,” Fina said. “If they'll follow through on it, then it will be very beneficial for the entire state.

Governor Mary Fallin Applauds Approval of One-Stop Business Licensing Plan

03/17/2011 03:30 PM CDT

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin applauded the Oklahoma House of Representatives today for approving a bill that would implement part of the agenda she laid out in her State of the State address.

House Bill 1601, by state Rep. Aaron Stiles and state Sen. Clark Jolley, would establish a one-stop shop for business owners to obtain licenses and permits, making the process more efficient and convenient for Oklahoma businesses. The Senate has already passed a similar bill, SB 772.

Fallin released the following statement:

"Creating a user-friendly, one-stop shop for business licensing is an important part of making Oklahoma friendlier to business growth and job creation. It shouldn't be any easier to open a business in Texas than it is in Oklahoma, and legislation like this goes a long way toward making sure it isn't."

Governor's Business Licensing One-Stop Plan Approved

OKLAHOMA CITY – The Oklahoma House of Representatives has approved Gov. Mary Fallin's request to provide convenience to Oklahoma business owners.

House Bill 1601, by state Rep. Aaron Stiles (R-Norman) and state Sen. Clark Jolley (R-Edmond), would establish a one-stop shop through which business owners could establish a new business and obtain the licenses and permits they need in one convenient location.

“This plan is designed to cut through the government bureaucracy, which is a strong disincentive to the creation of new businesses and jobs,” Stiles explained. “Business owners should not be forced to navigate through a gauntlet of multiple agencies and government red tape in order to start their business.”

“Governor Fallin’s proposal will enable Oklahoma businessmen to spend less time dealing with government and more time focusing on their business,” added House Government Modernization

The creation of a closing fund was mentioned as one of Fallin’s priorities in her State of the State address in February. Fallin released the following statement, encouraging lawmakers to pass HB 1953, which would create that fund:

“Authorizing the Quick Action Closing Fund is a key part of our job creation agenda. It will grant my administration an important tool as we work to ‘seal the deal’ with businesses that are serious about bringing a large number of jobs and a substantial investment to the state

Oklahoma Now: Time to Modernize our Government

03/08/2011 12:00 AM CST

Over the course of this prolonged national recession, Oklahomans and Americans everywhere have been called on to make sacrifices. They’ve balanced their budgets by tightening their belts, and they have found creative, sometimes difficult, ways to live within their means.

Government is not immune to the recession, nor should it be exempt from the kind of sacrifices that Oklahoma’s families and businesses have been making for several years.

Going into Fiscal Year 2012, our state government is facing a $500 million shortfall. Balancing the budget will require difficult decisions and budget cuts.

Originally, those budget cuts were estimated to be as high as 8-10 percent for every agency. While not impossible to absorb, those kind of deep reductions would certainly have a real impact on agencies dealing with public safety, health, and education. I am proud to say that, through the use of innovative cost-saving measures, my executive

Governor's Plan to Save $3.6 Million Approved

Oklahoma City, Oklahoma — Governor Mary Fallin’s proposal to modernize the state’s vendor payment system and save $3.6 million per year has been approved by the House of Representatives’ Government Modernization Committee.

House Bill 1086 proposes to utilize electronic payments methods such as direct deposit to pay the state’s thousands of vendor invoices. The bill is sponsored by state Reps. Jason Murphey (R-Guthrie), Josh Cockroft (R-McLoud), and state Sen. Clark Jolley (R-Edmond).

Fallin called on legislators to approve the reform during her State of the State address. Fallin proposed the change after the Office of State Finance indicated that the state could be spending up to $13.50 per vendor payment for each payment made using traditional paper conveyances such as payment warrants. This compares to electronic payments which cost the state approximately 5 cents per transfer.

Currently, approximately 230,000

The 45th Infantry Brigade Combat Team will deploy to Afghanistan in late May or early June, military officials said.

Fallin and the legislators watched a group of soldiers go through a training exercise and then chatted with others in a mess hall.

“We want to make sure our soldiers have the training to not only perform their mission, but to be safe,” Fallin said. “It's comforting to see the great training for combat that is going on here at Camp Gruber.”

Muskogee leaders at the event included Mayor John Tyler Hammons, City Manager Greg Buckley, Greater Muskogee Area Chamber of Oklahoma Gov. Mary Fallin is not convinced president's offer would allow state solutions for health care reform. President Obama says states could get waiver on some federal rules by 2014.

BY Chris Casteel, The Oklahoman

WASHINGTON — Gov. Mary Fallin welcomed President Barack Obama's announcement Monday that states should get an earlier chance to design their own health care systems, but she said she was still concerned the law's mandates would hinder state solutions.

“I'd like to just opt out totally, you know, of the health care bill and allow Oklahoma its ability to innovate,” Fallin said here after she and other governors met with Obama at the White House.

The health care law — along with rapidly growing costs for Medicaid, the federal-state health care program — was a major topic of discussion at the National Governors Association gathering in Washington over the past few

The governor said she was here to get a "great" tour, talk about the mission of Fort Sill and continue to build upon the community partnership that is so important to keeping Oklahoma's five military installations safe and secure. Fallin said she actually comes here quite a bit.

She and others announced their support for the grant after working with state agencies to ensure that no unworkable federal mandates were included.

Governor Mary Fallin: "After thoroughly reviewing the 'early innovator' grant, I am happy to say that the federal assistance we are being offered is consistent with our mission to design and implement an Oklahoma-based health insurance exchange. OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today released the following statement after the state Board of Equalization met to certify the latest revenue estimates. New revenue figures show the state will have $106.4 million more than estimated at a previous board meeting in December.

“The revenue estimates certified today show lawmakers will have a budget shortfall of approximately $500 million to make up during the coming fiscal year which is an improvement over previous estimates and gives us hope the economy is slowly recovering,” Fallin said. “But to make sure Oklahoma fully recovers from the national recession, we must continue to streamline and modernize state government, eliminate unnecessary spending and implement pro-business reforms to attract new jobs and more opportunities for working Oklahomans.”

The revenue estimates certified by the Board of Equalization were enough to enact the income tax trigger in state law,

02/22/2011 12:00 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Legislation designed by Governor Mary Fallin’s Workers’ Compensation Study Group and authored by Senator Anthony Sykes and Senator Patrick Anderson was unveiled and passed today at a Senate Judiciary Committee hearing. The legislation, SB 878, is a comprehensive overhaul of the current workers’ compensation system and would reduce costs to businesses while maintaining a fair playing field for both workers and employers.

“Oklahoma’s workers’ compensation system is one of the most expensive, least efficient systems of its kind in the nation,” said Governor Fallin. “Unfortunately, it represents a real obstacle to business recruitment and retention and drives jobs out of state. The reforms we are offering today will change that, by reducing medical and legal costs so that employers can spend their money on job creation and business expansion instead of litigation. Our plan creates a system that is fair

“Oklahoma’s Path to Prosperity”

By Governor Mary Fallin

Earlier this week, I delivered my first State of the State address as the 2011 legislative session convened. I also delivered to the Legislature a responsible executive budget that strikes a balance between achieving savings through streamlining government services and pursuing necessary budget cuts.

All state agencies must make shared sacrifices this year – there’s no way around it. Our government cannot spend money it does not have. But while every agency will be cut, my budget proposes lesser cuts to priorities like health and human services, education and public safety in order to preserve vital services for all Oklahomans.

Cutting government spending this year is just a start. I am also proposing a long-term plan, a path to prosperity, for the state of Oklahoma. It includes important job-creating reforms to our legal

Governor Fallin Declares Emergency as Winter Storm Approaches

01/31/2011 12:00 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin today declared a State of Emergency for all 77 Oklahoma counties as state officials continued their emergency response preparations for a dangerous winter storm heading toward the state.

Because the latest weather event could include blizzard conditions and possible power outages, emergency management authorities recommended issuing this declaration before the storm arrived so weight and size limits on state roadways could be waived to allow heavy power company vehicles to position themselves across the state.

“The winter storm heading toward Oklahoma has the potential to cause dangerous travel conditions and sub-freezing temperatures,” Fallin said. “This disaster declaration will make sure we can prepare for the winter weather ahead of the storm.”

01/27/2011 12:00 AM CST

OKLAHOMA CITY – Governor Mary Fallin issued the following statement today, after learning about obstructionist actions by the State Board of Education at their first meeting with new State Superintendent of Public Instruction Janet Barresi. The Board voted to reject hires of senior staff that Superintendent Barresi had placed on the consent docket, though past precedent routinely has been to have staff working at the department before board approval and often without ever getting board approval. Governor Fallin's statement:

“The public indicated their support of Superintendent Barresi when they elected her to office. She should clearly be able to appoint her own senior staff, especially given that all of her intended hires are well-qualified. My goal as governor, and Janet Barresi’s goal as superintendent, is to improve our schools and help our children. I would hope the Board of Education would join us in that mission rather than engage

The secretary of commerce will play an important role in that process,” Fallin said. “Dave Lopez has been a successful businessman and tremendous civic leader with connections all around the nation. He brings a great deal of expertise and enthusiasm to the job and I’m happy to have him serve in my cabinet. Dave is going to join an experienced and diverse cabinet dedicated to moving the state of Oklahoma
